Senses of the Empire Eleanor Betts,2017-02-24 The Roman empire afforded a kaleidoscope of sensations Through a series of multisensory case studies centred on people places buildings and artefacts and on specific aspects of human behaviour this volume develops ground-breaking methods and approaches for sensory studies in Roman archaeology and ancient history Authors explore questions such as what it felt like and symbolised to be showered with saffron at the amphitheatre why the shape of a dancer's body made him immediately recognisable as a social outcast how the dramatic gestures loud noises and unforgettable smells of a funeral would have different meanings for members of the family and for bystanders and why feeling the weight of a signet ring on his finger contributed to a man's sense of identity A multisensory approach is taken throughout with each chapter exploring at least two of the senses of sight hearing smell taste and touch The contributors individual approaches vary reflecting the possibilities and the wide application of sensory studies to the ancient world Underlying all chapters is a conviction that taking a multisensory approach enriches our understanding of the Roman empire but also an awareness of the methodological problems encountered when reconstructing past experiences

The Elements of scientific psychology Knight Dunlap,1922 Reductive Model of the Conscious Mind Galus, Wieslaw,Starzyk, Janusz,2020-08-21 Research on natural and artificial brains is proceeding at a rapid pace However the understanding of the essence of consciousness has changed slightly over the millennia and only the last decade has brought some progress to the area Scientific ideas emerged that the soul could be a product of the material body and that calculating machines could imitate brain processes However the authors of this book reject the previously common dualism the view that the material and spiritual psychic processes are separate and require a completely different substance as their foundation Reductive Model of the Conscious Mind is a forward thinking book wherein the authors identify processes that are the essence of conscious thinking and place them in the imagined simplified structure of cells able to memorize and transmit information in the form of impulses which they call neurons The purpose of the study is to explain the essence of consciousness to the degree of development of natural sciences because only the latter can find a way to embed the concept of the conscious mind in material brains The book is divided into three parts Part 1 works to convince readers that the emergence of consciousness does not require detailed knowledge of the structure and morphology of the brain with the exception of some specific properties of the neural network structure that the authors attempt to point out Part 2 proves that the biological structure of many natural brains fulfills the necessary conditions for consciousness and intelligent thinking Similarly Part 3 shows the ways in which artificial creatures imitating natural brains can meet these conditions which gives great hopes for building artificially intelligent beings endowed with consciousness Covering topics that include cognitive architecture the embodied mind and machine learning this book is ideal for cognitive scientists philosophers of mind neuroscientists psychologists researchers academicians and advanced level students The book can also help to focus the research of linguists neurologists and biophysicists on the biophysical basis of postulated information processing into knowledge structures

Experimental Psychology, Cognition, and Human Aging Donald H. Kausler, 2012-12-06 This book is a major revision and extension of my earlier book Experimental Psychology and Human Aging which appeared in 1982 The intervening years have seen a remarkable expansion of psychological research on human aging especially on topics dealing with cognition They have also seen research on cognitive aging gain increasing importance within the mainstream of basic cognitive research As my lecture notes for my course in the psychology of aging grew so did my apprehension regarding the task ahead of me in revising the first edition The research explosion in cognitive aging forced several major changes in content from the first to the second edition Two chapters on learning and memory in the first edition were necessarily expanded to six chapters in the present edition Similarly the single prior chapter on perception and attention became two chapters as did the single prior chapter on thinking Another change from the first edition is in the addition of some review of the effects of abnormal aging on various cognitive processes particularly in regard to memory functioning To keep the revision within reasonable length some sacrifices had to be made The multiple chapters on methodology and theory in the first edition were condensed into the present single chapter However the major topics from the first edition were retained and in fact added to by the inclusion of important topics and issues that emerged over the past eight years following key intelligence test question one that ordinarily might help assess a person's mathematical aptitude. If you count a dog's tail as one of its legs, how many legs does a dog have? Five, of course, is the correct answer for a math test. Intelligent people say five because it is valid in mathematical systems and contemporary thinking and is highly regarded and rewarded by our society. However, we don't solely live our lives or think in mathematical systems. Our natural sense of reason can consider what we know from our actual contact with a real normal dog too. That's when our multitude of other natural senses come into play: senses of touch, motion, color, texture, language, sound, smell, consciousness, community, trust, contrast, and love. They each provide further information and help our sense of reason make more sense and a more informed decision. They enable our thinking to register that a tail is different than a leg, that a dog has four legs, not five, no matter what might be correct in mathematical logic. It is a grave mistake for anyone not to take seriously the difference between 4 leg and 5 leg ways of knowing and our learned prejudice for the latter. As this book shows, when they are not in balance, the schism between their two different ways of registering the world is significant. Four leg knowing is a magnificent psychological and physiological phenomenon with deep natural system roots into the eons, the heart of Earth, and our psyche. It brings our widely diverse multiplicity of natural sensory experiences into our awareness. Five leg knowing produces important awareness through abstract imagination, labels, and stories. However, when it does not also seek and contain 4 leg knowledge, it results not only in our desensitization but in the separation of our thinking from the regenerative powers of Earth's natural systems within and around us. This profound loss produces the many destructive side effects of our artificial world that we can not readily solve. Four leg versus 5 leg discord creates an entrenched conflict in our psyche between how we think and how nature works. This is a point source of the stress and contamination our society produces in the integrity of people and the environment. It generates our many disorders and troubles that are seldom found in nature. It is important to recognize that by financially and socially rewarding us for getting good grades or for making the grade by using nature isolated 5 leg thinking, our socialization habitually bonds conditions, programs, or ad
