Winzeler, 2004-02-29 Among Borneo's spectacular indigenous buildings the longhouses mortuary monuments and other architectural forms of the interior are some of the most outstanding and much of the renewed interest in indigenous architecture has focused on the rapidly vanishing or now extinct traditional forms of a small number of surviving examples or recreations Drawing on the author's extensive research and travel in Borneo this impressive and original study offers a more comprehensive account of this architecture than any previous work Organized into two sections the book first documents and explains traditional built forms in terms of tools and materials the environmental context village organization and social arrangements This section includes a full discussion of architecture designs and symbolism especially those dealing with life and death The author next looks at the destruction or transformation of traditional architecture based on a number of interrelated developments including religious conversion Western influence internal migration and logging as well as governmental attitudes and efforts The book concludes with a discussion of recent efforts to document and preserve traditional structures and turn indigenous as well as colonial architecture into history and heritage German Pedagogy.

Antoinette Fauve-Chamoux, Emiko Ochiai, 2009 Is the Asian stem family different from its European counterpart This question is a central issue in this collection of essays assembled by two historians of the family in Eurasian perspective The stem family is characterized by the residential rule that only one married child remains with the parents This rule has a direct effect upon household structure In short the stem family is a domestic unit of production and reproduction that persists over generations handing down the patrimony through non egalitarian inheritance In spite of its ambiguous status in current family typology as something lurking in the valley between the nuclear family and the joint family the stem family was an important family form in pre industrial Western Europe and has been a focus of the European family history since Ferdinand Le Play and more recently Peter Laslett However the encounter with Asian family history has revealed that many areas in Asia also had and still have a considerable proportion of households with a stem family structure The stem family debate has entered a new stage In this book some studies that benefited from recently created large databases present micro level analyses of dynamic aspects of family systems while others discuss more broadly the rise and fall of family systems past and present A main concern of this book is whether the family type in a society is ethno culturally determined and resistant to changes or created by socio economic conditions Such a comparison that includes Asian countries activates a new phase of the discussion on the stem family and family systems in a global perspective Year Book Australia No. 76 - 1994
