In Season and Out of Season John Brug, 2023-06-27 This book of sermons is collection of sermons selected from 54 years of preaching It focuses on sermons for special occasions for the festivals of the church year for church anniversaries and for similar special events The perspective of the sermons is confessional Lutheran The title In Season and Out of Season relates to the fact that there are so many seasonal selections in this collection In its original setting in Scripture the expression in season and out of season refers to the truth that the preacher's message must remain the same whether people want to hear or they do not want to hear it 2 Timothy 4:2 Here the term is used in a different sense Since the gospel message is the same in every season sermons designed for a specific season or occasion of the church year may be read any time of the year We can celebrate Christmas in July and Easter on any day of the year Readers can read these sermons in season or out of season

Sermons for All Seasons Bruce W. Porter, 2005 Sermons for All Seasons Alhassan Macaulay, 2004-04-01 It is the author's belief that a sermon becomes relevant only when it makes a connection between what Scripture says and what is happening in the church and the wider community Without this connection the sermon loses focus and therefore its relevance It is with this view in mind that the sermons were composed These collections of sermons were preached over a period of time to a church congregation They address problems and issues that the church congregation faced at particular moments The sermons could be read at any time and used for occasions such as prayer meetings Bible discussion groups and Sunday school They could also be a valuable resource to those involved in outreach work to homeless shelters nursing homes and prisons to name a few Sermons for All Seasons is written in a simple style without compromising the theological message It is my belief that the sincerity of the message coupled with the simplicity of the written style will help drive home the full impact of the gospel message
