

Witches, Wives and Mothers: witchcraft persecution and women's confessions in seventeenth-century England

LOUISE JACKSON

Roehampton Institute, London, United Kingdom

ABSTRACT The confessions made by the Suffolk women charged with witchcraft in 1645 indicate that, in many cases, accused women were contextualising their own experiences within a wider demonological framework. Often they were judging themselves in their roles as wives and mothers – the witch, after all, was the behavioural opposite of the stereotypical role model of the ‘good wife’. There are noticeable references to infanticide, suicide and possible abuse. It could well be that women who possessed no other language to describe certain traumatic experiences took on the conceptual framework of demonology as a way of explaining events. Witch-hunting was a method of behavioural control in which women as victims (in many senses of the word) were themselves participating because they had no other framework of reference.

Introduction

In August 1645 Suffolk woman Anna Moats was judged guilty of witchcraft at a special court of Oyer and Terminer held in Bury St Edmunds. Magistrates were told she had confessed, within 2 hours of her arrest, to having ‘imps’ or evil spirits and that the devil had first appeared to her “when she was a lone in her howse and after she had been curseinge of her husband and her childeringe”.^[1] Branded as a scold and a witch, Anna had been persecuted for her failure to conform to the accepted norms of female behaviour – instead of fulfilling the expected role of a ‘good’ wife and mother she had been cursing and shouting at her husband and children. Anna was just one of over 100 individuals, mostly women, who were the
