Peter Paul Rubens' hunting scenes have been known for their energy and level of detail in the animals portrayed. His paintings of exotic animals demonstrate his skill in rendering subjects he may not have seen in the wild. Rubens drew from animal lore, etchings, zoological texts, taxidermy specimens, and royal zoos to give his animals a sense of realism. His animals possess emotive qualities which are generally not found in hunting scenes previous to the baroque period. This study will explore Rubens' use of exotic and domestic animals, their roles in the composition, each animal's iconography in the history of western art, and their relationship to their hunters. Six hunting scenes created by Rubens will be examined with these parameters in mind. This thesis includes recent scholarship on Rubens' hunting scenes, which focus on the sources of Rubens' painted animals and their iconographical representations in the history of western art. Hunting Scenes Arnout Balis, 1986 Corpus Rubenianum

Visions of the Courtly Body Christiane Hille,2013-01-09 In 1603 the beginning of the Stuart reign painting was of minor importance at the English court where the elaborately designed masques of Inigo Jones served as the prime medium of royal representation Only two decades later their most celebrated performer George Villiers the First Duke of Buckingham had assembled one of the largest and most significant collections of painting in early seventeenth century Europe His career as the personal and political favourite of two succeeding monarchs James I and Charles I coincides with the commission of a number of highly ambitious portraits from the hands of Peter Paul Rubens and Anthony van Dyck that displayed his body in spectacular manner As the first comprehensive study of Buckingham's patronage of the visual arts this book is concerned with the question of how the painted image of the courtier transferred strategies of social distinction that had originated in the masque to the language of painting Establishing a new grammar in the competing rhetorics of bodily self fashioning this recast notion of portraiture contributed to an epistemological change in perceptions of visual representation at the early modern English court in the course of which painting advanced to the central art form in the aesthetics of kingship constructs a fresh theoretical framework for thinking about animals as more than symbols or passive subjects and for acknowledging a history in which both humans and animals had a stake Collections of Painting in Madrid, 1601-1755 (Parts 1 and 2) Marcus B.
