decade a profound change has occurred in linguistic science Not only have old problems been tackled from an entirely new point of view but also quite a few new fields of linguistic research have been opened The common characteristic of the majority of the theories and methods developed recently is the search for a more adequate description of language Adequacy does not mean simply that the theory must conform to the facts It must also meet the general requirements of present day theories coherence clear cut notions rigor of presentation It has also become abundantly clear that linguistic research cannot be content with the registration and classification of linguistic phenomena In one way or another linguistics must try to explain the deep seated regularities in language which in general do not appear on the surface in some straightforward way Therefore we find the attribute deep very often in contemporary linguistic literature Linguistic theories seek an explanation for the observed facts in terms of a system of hypotheses about the functioning of language As research proceeds these will undergo essential changes Some of them will be waived others complemented The papers of the present volume follow these general principles of linguistic theory though they may differ from each other in the way of presentation considerably Some of the papers make use of the framework of transformational generative grammar e g Kuroda Perlmutter others approach the pertinent problem from a different angle e g Dupraz and Rouault Apresyan Mel'cuk and Zol'kovski *Die slavischen Sprachen / The Slavic Languages. Department of the Army, 1948 Sentence Processing: A Crosslinguistic Perspective Dieter Hillert, 1998-07-13 The innovative element of this volume is its overview of the fundamental psycholinguistic topics involved in sentence processing While most psycholinguistic studies focus on a single language and induce a general model of universal sentence processing this volume proposes a cross linguistic approach It contains two distinct features first embraced in the 18th century by brothers Freiherr Wilhelm von Humboldt and Alexander von Humboldt First it offers a linguistic theory that characterizes universal cognitive features of the human language processor or the mind and its biological source independent of a single language structure Second it contains a language theory which considers the diversity of linguistic structures and provides a powerful theory of language processing Contributors cover a wide range of topics including word recognition fixed expressions grammatical constraints empty categories and parsing Their research involves analyses of 12 languages This book provides an overview of central psycholinguistic topics in sentence processing
