SISAP and SPIRE. Similarity Search Pavel Zezula, Giuseppe Amato, Vlastislav Dohnal, Michal Batko, 2006-06-07. The area of similarity searching is a very hot topic for both research and commercial applications. Current data processing applications use data with considerably less structure and much less precise queries than traditional database systems. Examples are multimedia data like images or videos that offer query by example search, product catalogs that provide users with preference based search, scientific data records from observations or experimental analyses such as biochemical and medical data or XML documents that come from heterogeneous data sources on the Web or in intranets and thus does not exhibit a global schema. Such data can neither be ordered in a canonical manner nor meaningfully searched by precise database queries that would return exact matches. This novel situation is what has given rise to similarity searching also referred to as content based or similarity retrieval. The most general approach to similarity search still allowing construction of index structures is modeled in metric space. In this book Prof. Zezula and his co-authors provide the first monograph on this topic describing its theoretical background as well as the practical search tools of this innovative technology.

Operators for Similarity Search Deepak P. Prasad M. Deshpande, 2015-07-07. This book provides a comprehensive tutorial on similarity operators. The authors systematically survey the set of similarity operators primarily focusing on their semantics while also touching upon mechanisms for processing them effectively. The book starts off by providing introductory material on similarity search systems highlighting the central role of similarity operators in such systems. This is followed by a systematic categorized overview of the variety of similarity operators that have been proposed in literature over the last two decades including advanced operators such as RkNN, Reverse k Ranks, Skyline k Groups, and kNN Match. Since indexing is a core technology in the practical implementation of similarity operators, various indexing mechanisms are summarized. Finally, current research challenges are outlined so as to enable interested readers to identify potential directions for future investigations. In summary, this book offers a comprehensive overview of the field of similarity search operators, allowing readers to understand the area of similarity operators as it stands today and in addition providing them with the background needed to understand recent novel approaches.
