The Lost Child Julie Myerson,2012-01-05 The most controversial book in Britain Urgent and vivid A serious writerly self critical account of what it means to feel that despite love and hope and good intentions you have failed as a parent and that the child you bore while still eerily painfully familiar is lost to you Daily Telegraph An aching empty nest memoir a mother mourning for her uncomplicated little children now grown whom she could care for write about without comeback love and control The Times One bleak late winter s day Julie Myerson finds herself in a graveyard looking for traces of a young woman who died nearly two centuries before As a child in Regency England Mary Yelloly painted an exquisite album of watercolours that uniquely reflected the world she lived in But Mary died at the age of twenty one and when Julie comes across this album she is haunted by the potential never realised the barely lived life cut short And most of all she is reminded of her own child Because only days earlier Julie and her husband locked their eldest son out of the family home He was just seventeen How could it have come to this After a happy growing up it had taken only a matter of months for this bright sweet good humoured boy to completely lose his way and propel his family into daily chaos He had discovered cannabis and was now smoking it everyday and nothing they could say or do no help they could offer seemed to reach him And Julie whose emotionally fragile relationship with her own father had left her determined to love her children better had to accept that she was for the moment at least powerless to bring back the boy she had known Honest warm and often profoundly upsetting this is the parallel story of a girl and a boy separated by centuries The circumstances are very different but the questions remain terrifyingly the same What happens when a child disappears from a family What will survive of any of us in memory or in history And how is a mother to cope when love however absolute however unconditional is not enough to save her child

The Making of a Refugee Tasoulla Hadjiyanni, 2002-03-30 Through an examination of interviews provided by 100 children of refugees in Cyprus born after their family's displacement Hadjiyanni illustrates the formation of a refugee consciousness an identity adopted by many children who never experienced the actual displacement of their family Focusing on the process by which a child born into a refugee family develops a refugee identity the book identifies nine dimensions that inform this consciousness Establishing the family as the primary transmitter of the refugee identity and the child as its constructor the author points to the power of homeplace in forming and supporting such an identity The book challenges the notion that refugee consciousness is a separate identity and a crisis by reinterpreting it as a resistance to adversity Shedding new light on what it means to be a refugee this work is a welcome addition to the field Beginning with a discussion of the meaning of the term refugee and how it has been adopted by the children of some refugees in Cyprus the author moves to an examination of the meaning of past and present to the formation of a refugee consciousness She then looks to the causes of such identity formation focusing on the transference of identity from parent to child and the effects of past loss on children who have not actually experienced displacement Housing issues are also examined as a contributing factor as refugee housing is typically distinct and constrained compared to housing for native citizens of a community The author concludes her work with a discussion of the implications of the Cyprus example for both the future and for general refugee studies
