Moving To Nowhere Childrens Stories Of Homelessness:

Moving to Nowhere Mary E. Walsh, 1992-03-30 The number of homeless families in the United States continues to increase at an alarming rate There is little doubt that becoming homeless and living in shelters has had significant effects on the lives of the children in these families While many empirical studies have documented the effects of homelessness on one or another aspect of children s lives Moving To Nowhere looks at the experience of losing one s home and living in a shelter from the perspective of the child Children who are homeless tell their own story They speak of life in a shelter as they have known it It is through these stories that human service professionals can come to see homelessness as the children themselves see it and can learn what living in a shelter is like Children who are homeless tell their own story They describe how they became homeless why they think it happened to their family what their expectations and concerns were as they realized they would be moving to a shelter and what the shelter was like when they arrived They speak often of missing their old neighborhoods their friends and their extended family They report their fears their worries about their family s future the absence of money and resources and for some the presence of violence or substance abuse in their families They repeatedly tell of their embarrassment about being homeless this profoundly colors their relationships to friends schoolmates and teachers And in each of their stories these children provide clear and moving examples of how they manage to survive on a day to day basis while they wait for permanent housing Health care professionals psychologists and teachers as well as students and the general public will find this work poignant and instructive

Communication and Disenfranchisement provides parallel case studies applying the issues and concepts discussed in the essays. Used together, these books provide theoretically based applications of social health issues within a communication framework. Traditionally, health communication research has emphasized the communication-physical health relationship. Inadvertently, this primary focus has restricted what information has been included under the domain of health communication. These books expand that domain by examining how the communication-disenfranchisement relationship is accomplished, managed, and overcome, and by recognizing the significance of the pragmatic and theoretic implications of this inquiry.

Meddling with Mythology Rosaline S. Barbour, Guro Huby, 2005-08-04. Meddling with Mythology examines the role of research in the construction of modern mythology or folklore surrounding HIV/AIDS. Researchers from a variety of disciplines reflect on the insights gained and the impact of their work in light of the initial panic surrounding the prediction of an AIDS epidemic. Issues discussed include power representation, the politics of text, understanding research relationships, impact of research on researchers and responders, potential for change. Meddling with Mythology takes the reader from the theoretical to the practicable and from the public to the personal in the representations of AIDS. The issues raised here also have great significance for those concerned with the social construction of knowledge, theory building, and the research process more generally.
