

PROSE OF RESTORATION AGE

The Restoration marks the beginning of modern prose. Matthew Arnold remarks: —the Restoration marks the birth of our modern English prose. It was an age of intellectualism and rationalism, the qualities which are essential for prose.

Various political parties and groups, and growing interest in day to day activities encouraged journalism which needed simple, straightforward prose style. Thus, various factors contributed to the evolution of modern prose during the Restoration period. John Dryden (1631-1700) was one of the greatest prose writers of this period. His prefaces and his famous Essay on Dramatic Poetry make him —the leader of that modern prose in which the style is plain, simple and free from all exaggeration.

Next to Dryden, John Bunyan (1628-1688) was the greatest prose-writer of the period. He wrote two prose allegories, Grace Abounding and The Pilgrim's Progress. He is called a pioneer of English novel. His style is simple, clear, lucid, Biblical and colloquial.

Other writers of this period were Lord Halifax, Sir William Temple, Thomas Sprat, and George Saville.

RESTORATION IN DRAMA

The theatres which were closed in 1642 were opened during the Restoration. They became the riotous haunt of the upper classes. Consequently, the plays written for the play houses were distinctly calculated by the authors to appeal to a courtly and cavalier audience. It is this that explains the rise of the heroic tragedy, which dealt with themes of epic magnitude, and the development of the comedy of manners, which portrayed the sophisticated life of the dominant class of society – its gaiety, foppery, insolence and intrigue.

The Restoration Heroic Tragedy:

The Restoration tragedy is also known as the Heroic Tragedy. John Dryden was the protagonist and writer of the Heroic tragedy. His famous tragedies are Tyrannic Love, Conquest of Granada.
