Knowledge Science, Engineering and Management Dimitris Karagiannis, Zhi Jin, 2009-11-17. Following two successful events in Guilin, People's Republic of China (KSEM 2006) and in Melbourne, Australia (KSEM 2007), the third event in this conference series was held for the first time in Europe, namely in Vienna, Austria (KSEM 2009), aimed to be a communication platform and meeting ground for research on knowledge science, engineering, and management, attracting high-quality state-of-the-art publications from all over the world. It offers an exceptional opportunity for presenting original work, technological advances, practical problems, and concerns of the research community. The importance of studying knowledge from different viewpoints, such as science, engineering, and management, has been widely acknowledged. The accelerating pace of the Internet age challenges organizations to compress communication and innovation cycles to achieve a faster return on investment for knowledge. Thus next generation business solutions must be focused on supporting the creation of value by adding knowledge rich components as an integral part to the work process. Therefore an integrated approach is needed which combines issues from a large array of knowledge fields such as science, engineering and management. Based on the reviews by the members of the Program Committee and the additional reviewers, 42 papers were selected for this year's conference. Additionally two discussion panels dealing with Knowware, The Third Star after Hardware and Software and Required Knowledge for Delivering Services took place under the auspices of the conference. The papers and the discussions covered a great variety of approaches of knowledge science management and engineering thus making KSEM a unique conference.

A Search-based Theory of the On-the-run Phenomenon Dimitri Vayanos, Pierre-Olivier Weill, 2006 We propose a model in which assets with identical cash flows can trade at different prices. Infinitely lived agents can establish long positions in a search spot market or short positions by first borrowing an asset in a search repo market. We show that short sellers can endogenously concentrate in one asset because of search externalities and the constraint that they must deliver the asset they borrowed. That asset enjoys greater liquidity measured by search times and a higher lending fee (specialness). Liquidity and specialness translate into price premia that are consistent with no arbitrage. We derive closed form solutions for small frictions and can generate price differentials in line with observed on the run premia.
