Descriptive catalogue of photographs of North American Indians, by W.H. Jackson. 1877 Geological and Geographical Survey of the Territories (U.S.), 1877 Mound Builders and Monument Makers of the Northern Great Lakes, 1200-1600 Meghan C L Howey, 2012-11-20 Rising above the northern Michigan landscape prehistoric burial mounds and impressive circular earthen enclosures bear witness to the deep history of the region s ancient indigenous peoples These mounds and earthworks have long been treated as isolated finds and have never been connected to the social dynamics of the time in which they were constructed a period called Late Prehistory In Mound Builders and Monument Makers of the Northern Great Lakes 1200 1600 Meghan C L Howey uses archaeology to make this connection She shows how indigenous communities of the northern Great Lakes used earthen structures as gathering places for ritual and social interaction which maintained connected egalitarian societies in the process Examining every available ceramic sherd from every northern earthwork Howey combines regional archaeological investigations with ethnohistory analysis of spatial relationships and collaboration with tribal communities to explore changes in the area's social setting from 1200 to 1600. During this time, cultural shifts such as the adoption of maize horticulture led to the creation of earthen constructions. Burial mounds were erected marking claims to resources and defining areas for local ritual gatherings, while massive circular enclosures were constructed as intersocietal ceremonial centers. Together, Howey shows these structures made up part of an interconnected, purposefully designed cultural landscape. When societies incorporated the earthworks into their egalitarian social and ritual behaviors, the structures became something more ceremonial monuments. The first systematic examination of earthen constructions in what is today Michigan, Mound Builders and Monument Makers of the Northern Great Lakes 1200-1600, reveals complicated indigenous histories that played out in the area before European contact. Howey's richly illustrated investigation increases our understanding of the diverse cultures and dynamic histories of the pre-Columbian ancestors of today's Great Lake tribes. Pat Learns about Wild Peppermint, 1981. The Haast is in South Westland, John Dobrée Pascoe, 1966. The Welcome of Strangers, Atholl Anderson, 1998. Two hundred years ago, Māori in the south of New Zealand had a lifestyle quite distinct from their northern cousins and different experiences of contact with Europeans. This book provides an insight into those times, covering the period 1650-1850 and focusing on Māori history from Marlborough to Stewart Island. Atholl Anderson surveys the origins and migrations of Waitaha and Kāti Māmoe and the subsequent arrival of Ngāi Tahu and the establishment of their tribal authority and lifeways in the South Island. Drawing on tribal knowledge as well as early written accounts, he creates the fullest description yet of Māori in this period. Thunder and the Mosquito, Clarence Barr, 1981. The Journal of the Polynesian Society, Polynesian Society (N.Z.), 1906. Vols for 1892-1941 contain the transactions and proceedings of the society. Picture Writing, 1981.
