Diplomatic Identity in Postwar Britain James Southern, 2021-05-09 This book seeks to understand the complex ways in which the Foreign Office adapted to the rise of identity politics in Britain as it administered British foreign policy during the Cold War and the end of the British Empire After the Second World War cultural changes in British society forced a reconsideration of erstwhile diplomatic archetypes as restricting recruitment to white heterosexual upper or middle class men gradually became less socially acceptable and less politically expedient After the advent of the tripartite school system and then mass university education the Foreign Office had to consider recruiting candidates who were qualified but had not been socialized in the public schools and Oxbridge Similarly the passage of the 1948 Nationality Act technically meant nonwhites were eligible to join The rise of the gay rights movement and postwar women's liberation both generated further unique dilemmas for Foreign Office recruiters Diplomatic Identity in Postwar Britain seeks to destabilize concepts like talent merit equality and representation arguing that these were contested ideas that were subject to political and cultural renegotiation and revision throughout the period in question
