Research in Education , 1970 Literary Communication as Dialogue Roger D. Sell, 2020-11-15 As traced by Roger D Sell literary communication is a process of community making As long as literary authors and those responding to them respect each other s human autonomy literature flourishes as an enjoyable though often challenging mode of interaction that is truly dialogical in spirit This gives rise to author respondent communities whose members represent existential commonalities blended together with historical differences These heterogeneous literary communities have a larger social significance in that they have long served as counterweights to the hegemonic tendencies of modernity and more recently to postmodernity s well intentioned but restrictive politics of identity In post postmodern times their ethos is increasingly one of pleasurable egalitarianism The despondent anti hedonism of the twentieth century intelligentsia can now seem rather dated Some of the papers selected for this volume develop Sell s ideas in mainly theoretical terms But most of them offer detailed criticism of particular anglophone writers ranging from Shakespeare Ben Jonson and other poets and dramatists of the early modern period through Wordsworth and Coleridge to Dickens Pinter and Rushdie

Readers and Society in Nineteenth-Century France M. Lyons, 2001-07-24 In the nineteenth century the reading public expanded to embrace new categories of consumers especially of cheap fiction These new lower class and female readers frightened liberals Catholics and republicans alike The study focuses on workers women and peasants and the ways in which their reading was constructed as a social and political problem to analyse the fear of reading in nineteenth century France The author presents a series of case studies of actual readers to examine their choices and their practices and to evaluate how far they responded to or subverted attempts at cultural domination

Learning Languages in Early Modern England Learning Languages in Early Modern England is the first major study of how English speakers learnt a variety of continental vernacular languages in the period between 1480 and 1720 English was practically unknown outside of England which meant that the English who wanted to travel and trade with the wider world in this period had to become language learners Using a wide range of printed and manuscript sources from multilingual conversation manuals to travellers diaries and letters where languages mix and mingle Learning Languages explores how early modern English speakers learned and used foreign languages and asks what it meant to be competent in another language in the past Beginning with language lessons in early modern England it offers a new perspective on England s educational revolution John Gallagher looks for the first time at the whole corpus of conversation manuals written for English language learners and uses these texts to pose groundbreaking arguments about reading orality and language in the period He also reconstructs the practices of language learning and multilingual communication which underlay early modern travel Learning Languages in Early Modern England offers a new and innovative study of a set of practices and experiences which were crucial to England s encounter with the wider world and to the fashioning of English linguistic and cultural identities at home Interdisciplinary in its approaches and broad in its chronological and thematic scope this volume places language learning and multilingualism at the heart of early modern British and European history
