Skill Formation Regimes in South Asia Markus Maurer, 2011 In the face of accelerated economic globalisation many of the industries in economically less developed countries have become more technology intensive Skill formation processes both inside and outside firms are therefore changing This study scrutinises such transformations by comparing from the perspective of historical institutionalism the skill formation regimes of the garment industries in Sri Lanka and Bangladesh It sheds light on the differences between the trajectories of the in firm skill formation regimes of the two countries and reveals the important part that varying paths of educational development in both countries have played in shaping these trajectories At the same time the study shows how in both countries state led skill formation regimes have been transformed not only by market forces and the growing importance of corporate business interests but also by the social demand for educational credentials

Shifting Powers: Understanding Emerging Markets in a Changing World

Stephen Wing, The 21st century is witnessing an unprecedented shift in global economic power. The rise of emerging markets, particularly those in Asia, Latin America and Africa, is reshaping the global landscape in profound ways. No longer are developed nations the sole drivers of economic growth and innovation. Emerging markets are increasingly becoming major players in global trade, finance and technology, presenting both immense opportunities and significant challenges. This book explores the complex dynamics at play in these rapidly evolving economies. We examine the factors driving their growth, analyzing economic development models, political systems and the crucial role of infrastructure development and foreign direct investment. We dissect the challenges inherent in these markets, from income inequality and infrastructure gaps to political risk and regulatory uncertainty. Crucially, we also address the opportunities for businesses and investors, providing guidance on market entry strategies, risk management and the importance of cultural sensitivity. The book further examines the implications of this shift for global trade, geopolitical relations and international cooperation. We analyze the increasing interconnectedness of emerging markets through trade agreements, regional integration and the growing role of international organizations. Ultimately, Shifting Powers offers a balanced and comprehensive perspective on the forces shaping the global economy, providing readers with the knowledge and insights necessary to navigate this dynamic environment successfully. Understanding the intricacies of these markets is not simply an academic exercise; it is crucial for policymakers, business leaders, investors and indeed anyone seeking to comprehend the evolving world order. The future of the global economy will be significantly shaped by how we engage with and understand the rise of emerging markets, and it is our hope that this book provides a valuable contribution to that understanding. Public Administration Training in Africa Peter Fuseini

Haruna, Shikha Vyas-Doorgapersad, 2014-12-19 There is a growing global interest in Africa and how to improve the quality of life of its people and for good reason. The world can no longer afford to ignore the democratic changes that have occurred across the continent over the past two decades, changes with tremendous implications for professional education and training for the tasks of nation. Knowledge, Curriculum, and Preparation for Work Stephanie Allais, Yael Shalem, 2018-04-16 In

Knowledge, Curriculum, and Preparation for Work the editors offer a timely collection of chapters approaching debates on economic and social change and employment within different types of economies. Considering questions of knowledge and curriculum, these works interrogate ways of thinking about relationships between different forms of work and education. The focus is both on the curriculum, the ways in which different types of knowledge affect the quality and organization of curricula that are intended to prepare for work, and the factors influencing and constraining what education can do to prepare for work, as well as how these factors shape and limit the role of educational preparation for work. Educators, Professionalism and Politics Terri Seddon, John Levin, 2013 This title brings together contributions from around the world that analyse and reflect on the way curriculum is configuring and reconfiguring that world. The Delusion of Knowledge

Transfer Susanne Koch, Peter Weingart, 2016-12-13 With the rise of the knowledge for development paradigm expert advice has become a prime instrument of foreign aid At the same time it has been object of repeated criticism the chronic failure of technical assistance a notion under which advice is commonly subsumed has been documented in a host of studies Nonetheless international organisations continue to send advisors promising to increase the effectiveness of expert support if their technocratic recommendations are taken up This book reveals fundamental problems of expert advice in the context of aid that concern issues of power and legitimacy rather than merely flaws of implementation Based on empirical evidence from South Africa and Tanzania the authors show that aid related advisory processes are inevitably obstructed by colliding interests political pressures and hierarchical relations that impede knowledge transfer and mutual learning As a result recipient governments find themselves caught in a perpetual cycle of dependency continuously advised by experts who convey the shifting paradigms and agendas of their respective donor governments For young democracies the persistent presence of external actors is hazardous ultimately it poses a threat to the legitimacy of their governments if their policy making becomes more responsive to foreign demands than to the preferences and needs of their citizens Vocational Education and Training in Southern Africa Salim Akoojee, Anthony Gewer, Simon A.
