

HOW IS THE PANORAMA OF LATIN AMERICA IN MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES?

According to PAHO, the average public spending for Mental Health in the region is only 2.0% of the health budget, in addition, 60% of this percentage goes to psychiatric hospitals.

brecha de tratamiento

On the other hand, the median treatment gap for affective, anxiety or substance use disorders is 77.9% in Latin America and the Caribbean. This shows that what is invested in mental health often falls short to carry out responsible processes that have good and lasting results.

It is estimated that in the region between 50 and 70% of the population do not have access to mental health services.

With the pandemic, mental health disorders have increased, but the region is still far behind in even complying with the mental health investment recommended by the UN before the coronavirus and its social consequences (no less than 10% of the budget of health of the country).

2. Chile

Chile, a leading country in the region, is the second country with the worst mental health in the world, according to a ranking carried out by IPSOS, a market research company. Peru, Argentina and Mexico are some of the countries that accompany Chile on the list with few places apart.

Currently there is an interruption of health services in 97% of the countries of the region. From this, PAHO warns that an "avalanche of mental health problems" may come in the months and years to come.

The neglect of mental health is historic. This has strongly marked the way in which governments approach this type of services and how much they take them into account within their agendas and budgets.

Health organizations insist on the need to invest in mental health in a region like Latin America, where crises are constant.

Grindle, 2018-06-05 Despite the Odds poses an important question How can we account for successful policy reform initiatives when the political cards are stacked against change Theories of politics usually predict that reform initiatives will be unsuccessful when powerful groups are opposed to change and institutions are biased against it This book however shows how the strategic choices of reform proponents alter the destinies of policy reforms by reshaping power equations and undermining institutional biases that impede change In many countries the political path to reform can be daunting Antireform interests are powerful and support for change is at best lukewarm Centrally important institutions strongly defend the policy status quo Despite these political odds reformers have seized the initiative in promoting reform weakening and marginalizing opposition groups and marshaling political patrons and networks to advance their initiatives Despite the Odds opens the black box of decision making in five initiatives designed to enhance the quality of education services in Latin America The book addresses the strategies used by reformers to manage the political process of change and those adopted by opposition

Managing for Learning Melissa Adelman, Renata Lemos, 2021-05-20 How can countries make sustainable gains in student learning at scale This is a pressing question for Latin America and the Caribbean LAC and the developing world more broadly as countries seek to build human capital to drive sustainable growth Significant progress in access has expanded coverage such that nearly all children in the region attend primary school but many do not gain basic skills and drop out before completing secondary school in part due to low quality service delivery The preponderance of evidence shows that it is learning and not schooling in and of itself that contributes to individual earnings economic growth and reduced inequality For LAC in particular low levels of human capital are a critical factor in explaining the region's relatively weak growth performance over the last half century The easily measurable inputs are well known and the end goal is relatively clear but raising student achievement at scale remains a challenge Why Part of the answer lies in management the managers structures and practices that guide how inputs into the education system are translated into outputs and ultimately outcomes

While management is often mentioned as an important factor in education policy discussions relatively little quantitative research has been done to define and measure it And even less has been done to unpack how and how much management matters for education quality This study presents new conceptual and empirical contributions that can be synthesized in four key messages 1 Student learning is unlikely to improve at scale without better management 2 Management quality can be measured and should be measured as a catalyst for improvement 3 Management affects how well every level of an education system functions from individual schools to central technical units and how well they work together 4 Several pathways to strengthening management are open to LAC countries now with the potential for significant results The study elaborates on each of these messages synthesizing recent data and research and presenting the results of several new research initiatives from across the region
