Seventy X Seven = ? Glenda Pray, 2015-11-20. Life happens to all of us. Oftentimes we are ill prepared to deal with the brute force winds of trouble that can leave us wounded and maimed. Being hurt can gouge the very life out of our lives. It is a true saying that hurt people hurt people. Humans are daily at risk of hurts being inflicted upon us by parental, sibling, marital, peer, coworker, or church relationships. One of the greatest threats to divine fulfillment and living a fulfilling life is unforgiveness. Its tentacles attach to every area of our lives, choking God's potential power, purpose, and promise right out of us. It is an untreated disease in our world, and sad to say so often in the church. Many are our afflictions, but God has promised to deliver us out of them all. He wants to heal our hurts and set us free from unforgiveness. I believe that the door of escape from the things that afflict and cripple our lives is being forgiven and giving forgiveness. If you or someone you know struggles with unforgiveness and bitterness, this book can help. It is a candid conversation, a practical perspective, a challenge for the heart, a refreshing for the soul, and much more. Sticks and Stones Jerome Neu, 2009-11-25. Sticks and stones may break my bones, but words will never hurt me. This schoolyard rhyme projects an invulnerability to verbal insults that sounds good but rings false. Indeed, the need for such a verse belies its own claims. For most of us, feeling insulted is a distressing and distressingly common experience. In Sticks and Stones, philosopher Jerome Neu probes the nature, purpose, and effects of insults, exploring how and why they humiliate, embarrass, infuriate, and wound us so deeply. What kind of injury is an insult? Is it determined by the insulter or the insulted? What does it reveal about the character of both parties as well as the character of society and its conventions? What role does insult play in social and legal life? When is telling the truth an insult? Neu draws upon a wealth of examples and anecdotes, as well as a range of views from Aristotle and Oliver Wendell Holmes to Oscar Wilde, John Wayne, Katherine Hepburn, and many others, to provide surprising answers to these questions. He shows that what we find insulting can reveal much about our ideas of character, honor, gender, the nature of speech acts, and social and legal conventions. He considers how insults, both intentional and unintentional, make themselves felt in play, Freudian slips, insult humor, rituals, blasphemy, libel, slander, and hate speech. And he investigates the insult's extraordinary power, why it can so quickly destabilize our sense of self and threaten our moral identity, the very center of our self-respect and self-esteem. Entertaining, humorous, and deeply insightful, Sticks and Stones unpacks the fascinating dynamics of a phenomenon more often painfully experienced than clearly understood.

On Justifying Moral Judgements (Routledge Revivals) Lawrence C. Becker, 2014-06-17. Much discussion of morality presupposes that moral judgments are always at bottom arbitrary. Moral scepticism, or at least moral relativism, has become common currency among the liberally educated. This remains the case even while political crises become intractable and it is increasingly apparent that the scope of public policy formulated with no reference to moral justification is extremely limited The thesis of On Justifying Moral Judgments insists on the contrary that rigorous justifications are possible for moral judgments Crucially Becker argues for the coordination of the three main approaches to moral theory axiology deontology and agent morality A pluralistic account of the concept of value is expounded and a solution to the problem of ultimate justification is suggested Analyses of valuation evaluation the is ought issue and the concepts of obligation responsibility and the good person are all incorporated into the main line of argument
