Metaphor II Jean-Pierre Noppen, Edith Hols, 1990-01-01 Metaphor though not now the scholarly mania it once was remains a topic of great interest in many disciplines albeit with interesting shifts in emphasis Warren Shibbes Metaphor An Annotated Bibliography and History Bloomington Ind 1971 recorded the initial interest Then Metaphor A Bibliography of Post 1970 Publications published by John Benjamins continued the record through the mania years up to 1985 when writings proliferated as metaphor was seen to be a fundamental category in human thought and language Five years later there is a need for a report on the newest thinking and tendencies in the field This need is fulfilled by Metaphor II which offers a comprehensive view of information which would otherwise remain scattered throughout a numbing plethora of resources including many sometimes hard to find publications from Eastern Europe Metaphor II systematically collects references of books articles and papers published between 1985 and May 1990 and includes for completeness corrections and additions to the earlier bibliographies Abstracts are given for many of the titles while four indices disciplines semantic fields metaphor theory and names multiply the number of access points to the information

Postmodern Social Analysis and Criticism John W. Murphy, 1989-06-15 Although postmodernism has had clear impact on literary criticism the social and political implications of this philosophy have not been systematically investigated Murphy's study is the first to bring a broad interdisciplinary perspective to the subject and to present postmodernism as a coherent social theory Responding with compelling arguments to critics of postmodernism Murphy develops a model that offers a viable alternative to traditional approaches to conceptualizing and studying social life In an introductory chapter Murphy looks at the differences between modernism and postmodernism and discusses the metanarratives that characterize the former He goes on to clarify key assumptions and concepts especially the postmodern opposition to the traditional Western separation of subject and object In subsequent chapters he describes the research methodology used by postmodernists their views of social ontology and the relationship between order and structure and the creation of socially responsible institutions The postmodernists reconceptualization of key aspects of cultural reality including time space reason and social relations is examined in detail Murphy concludes by exploring the political ramifications of the postmodernist model and its potential as a vehicle for building a genuinely democratic society This

Civil Society by Design Kendall Stiles,2002-06-30 Drawing on years of research and direct experience in Bangladesh Stiles pulls together theoretical strands from economics sociology and anthropology to help explain an emerging social structure in the Third World These structures which he calls intermestic development circles bring together international donor agencies with various domestic community and private organizations In Bangladesh not for profit agencies are dramatically transforming their operation and organizational cultures while in turn Western NGOs are themselves changing in subtle ways Scholars of development will find Stiles s intriguing account of the reciprocating effects of extensive interaction cooperation and tensions between international donors and domestic recipients informative and provocative Moving through three discernable phases each one explainable by resort to different theories these development circles grow from mere trading arrangements to a coherent social structure separate from the rest of civil society in Bangladesh While in the process of the not for profits receiving assistance become wealthier and more effective they lose much of their local identity and become part of a transnational network At the same time donors must recast themselves in order to work effectively with these agencies which often creates tension between local and home offices The book closes with some recommendations that might attenuate some of the more troubling effects of this transformation

Public Administration in an Information Age I. Th. M. Snellen, Wim B. H. J. van de Donk, 1998 This book is a joint effort of researchers who have been involved in research projects and programmes that have been trying to chart and reflect upon the implications of Information and Communication Technologies ICTs for Public Administration Tilburg Rotterdam Kassel Irvine Nottingham Glasgow Since the fifties computers had largely facilitated and the transformation of the minimal Night Watch state into the modern Welfare state through their contribution to their effectivity productivity and efficiency In most Handbooks of Public Administration computers are seen as neutral instruments and most of the time the role of computer technologies in the transformation of public administration is completely neglected This deafening silence is a great contrast with the way ICTs are actually changing public administration The faster the developments in a field of study are the more difficult it is to let the theories related to that field of study mature In such circumstances most statements will remain provisional and context dependent 25 years of research in Irvine California and

Kassel Germany and more than 10 years of research in Tilburg Rotterdam The Netherlands and about seven years of research in Glasgow Nottingham the United Kingdom nonetheless enables the presentation of a modest image of public administration as it is entering the information age Researchers in each of these groups have nevertheless not stopped trying to phrase theories about the implications of informatization for public administration with a more or less large scope that are robust in different contexts and over longer periods of time These results and theories covering a broad set of elements of the body of knowledge of public administration are presented in this volume As the authors try to demonstrate in this book informatization developments in public administration do not only challenge the existing body of knowledge of the public administration discipline but they are also opening up new perspectives and paradigms for the study of public administration

American Sociological Review ,1936 Includes sections Book reviews and Periodical literature Bibliographie Internationale de Sociologie 1987 British Library of Political and Economic Science,1991 IBSS is the essential tool for librarians university departments research institutions and any public or private institution whose work requires access to up to date and comprehensive knowledge on the social sciences Sociological Practice Review ,1991 Mass Society, Pluralism, and Bureaucracy Richard F. Hamilton,2001-01-30 Three major social theories mass society pluralism and bureaucracy are often employed to interpret and explain modern societies Although frequently invoked the theories themselves are poorly understood This book seeks to clarify the background context and major arguments of the theories assess the claims and validity of each provide expert commentary and suggest avenues for further work in each area Drawing on work in the humanities history sociology economic history and political science Hamilton is able to provide readers with a clear concise and accurate overview of the adequacy of these theories as well as their empirical validity Beginning with the mass society theory Hamilton offers a systematic empirical assessment of its major tenets and its abundant shortcomings While the validity of the mass society theory does not hold up there is more support for pluralism and Hamilton adeptly assesses its arguments while suggesting a more realistic and partitive reading of the theory And while the image of an all pervasive and growing bureaucracy seems to overwhelm society Hamilton argues that the theory seriously misrepresents the character of modern life Working through each of these theories using an integrated approach the author concludes each assessment with suggestions for which elements of the theory should be retained which should be reworked and which should be discarded altogether The Concept of Social Structure. Douglas Porpora,1987-10-16 Porpora is concerned with the concept of social structure and with the relationship between social structure and the individual He focuses on two different conceptions of social structure the Durkheimian conception which is the dominant way in which social structure is conceptualized by sociologists and an alternative conception based on a reading of Marx The author discusses in depth the various aspects of these two divergent theories and shows how the Marxian conception of social structure underlies even the newer structural analyses of racism sexism and power that go beyond Marxian theory He offers a sustained critique of Structural Sociology s theoretical elimination of the individual actor which results in a corresponding elimination of any form of agency from the explanation of social structural processes Journal of School Leadership ,1992
