One of the basic employment prerequisite is the ability to work well with people of different ages and motivate them. Good health, physical stamina, excellent interpersonal skills, thorough understanding of human anatomy, emotional stability and a flexible attitude are other important requirements. This is because the leisure and recreation professionals need to deal with the people constantly, boost their morale, motivate them to achieve their health goals and maintain therapeutic relationships with clients.

Apart from this, the professionals are expected to undergo a formal education program in recreation and leisure management before getting into the industry. The program prepares students to work as front-line practitioners, with an ability to establish programs, prepare budgets, recruit, and train and manage team of volunteers, and prepare budgets and market activities, programs and events.

Program Content

The recreation management and leisure services program runs for two years and covers a wide range of subjects. During the first year, the focus is on developing a strong understanding in gerontology and wellness, child and youth development, therapeutic recreation, interpersonal skill development, recreation programming and communication. It also incorporates an industry field placement and hands-on training on advanced computer applications.

In the second year, students study about healthy lifestyle management, festivals and event management, community development, recreation management and marketing, cultural awakening, the business of recreation and report writing.
