The Origin of Forced Labor in the Soviet State, 1917-1921 James Bunyan, 2019-12-01 Originally published in 1967 Many documents essential for understanding the development of Soviet labor policies from 1917 to 1921 have been selected translated and presented in this volume The Origin of Forced Labor in the Soviet State 1917 1921 begins with the early months of the revolution when the utopian slogans of workers control of industry and the promise of trade union management of industrial production were the controlling factors in shaping Soviet policy on labor Chapter 2 traces the gradual introduction of measures of labor compulsion first in relation to those the Bolsheviks classified as the bourgeoisie and afterwards in relation to the working class Chapters 3 through 5 the core of the study tell the story of labor militarization the new formula that for the Communists held the key to solving all economic problems in a socialist state Chapter 3 presents the theories used to justify the militarization of labor and outlines the institutional framework that kept the system in operation Chapter 4 deals with the application of this system to different segments of the Russian population Chapter 5 analyzes compulsory labor in transportation in which the validity of labor militarization as an institution came most sharply into question The last chapter
