Late Roman Towns in Britain Adam Rogers, 2011-03-28 In this book Adam Rogers examines the late Roman phases of towns in Britain Critically analysing the archaeological notion of decline he focuses on public buildings which played an important role administrative and symbolic within urban complexes Arguing against the interpretation that many of these monumental civic buildings were in decline or abandoned in the later Roman period he demonstrates that they remained purposeful spaces and important centres of urban life Through a detailed assessment of the archaeology of late Roman towns this book argues that the archaeological framework of decline does not permit an adequate and comprehensive understanding of the towns during this period Moving beyond the idea of decline this book emphasises a longer term perspective for understanding the importance of towns in the later Roman period

Clarke, Annagret Simms, 2017-07-14 This volume is based on possibly the biggest single Europe wide project in urban history In 1955 the International Commission for the History of Towns established the European historic towns atlas project in accordance with a common scheme in order to encourage comparative urban studies Although advances in urban archaeology since the 1960s have highlighted the problematic relationship between the oldest extant town plan and the actual origins of a town the large scale cadastral maps as they have been made available by the European historic towns atlas project are still necessary if we want to understand the evolution of the physical form of our towns By 2014 the project consisted of over 500 individual publications from over 18 different countries across Europe Each atlas comprises at least a core map at the scale of 1:2500 analytical maps and an explanatory text The time has come to use this enormous database that has been compiled over the last 40 years This volume itself based on a conference related to this topic that was held in the Royal Irish Academy in Dublin in 2006 takes up this challenge The focus of the volume is on the question of how seigneurial power influenced the creation of towns in medieval Europe and of how this process in turn influenced urban form Part I of the volume addresses two major issues the history of the use of town plans in urban research and the methodological challenges of comparative urban history Parts II and III constitute the core of the book focusing on the dynamic relationship between lordship and town planning in the core area of medieval Europe and on the periphery In Part IV the symbolic meaning of town plans for medieval people is discussed Part V consists of critical contributions by an archaeologist an art historian and an historical geographer By presenting case studies by leading researchers from different European countries this volume combines findings that were hitherto not available in English A comparison of the English and German bibliographies attached to this volume reveals some interesting insights as to how the focus of research shifted over time The book also shows how work on urban topography integrates the approaches of the historian archaeologist and historical geographer The narrative of medieval urbanization becomes enriched and the volume is a genuine contribution to European studies Life in a Roman Town Jane Shuter, 2005 In Life in a Roman Town discover how people lived in towns in the Roman Empire Look at the different buildings in the towns and what they were used for Learn about the houses Roman people lived in the clothes they wore and the food they ate Then use a recipe to make a popular food from the time fish sauce
