Street Journal This book offers a major reassessment of classical music in the twentieth century John Mauceri argues that the history of music during this span was shaped by three major wars of that century World War I World War II and the Cold War Probing why so few works have been added to the canon since 1930 Mauceri examines the trajectories of great composers who following World War I created voices that were unique and versatile but superficially simpler He contends that the fate of composers during World War II is inextricably linked to the political goals of their respective governments resulting in the silencing of experimental music in Germany Italy and Russia the exodus of composers to America and the sudden return of experimental music what he calls the institutional avant garde as the lingua franca of classical music in the West during the Cold War

Music Writing Literature, from Sand Via Debussy to Derrida Peter Dayan, 2006 Why does poetry appeal to music Can music be said to communicate as language does What between music and poetry is it possible to translate These fundamental questions have remained obstinately difficult despite the recent burgeoning of word and music studies Peter Dayan contends that the reasons for this difficulty were worked out with extraordinary rigour and consistency in a French literary tradition echoed by composers such as Berlioz and Debussy which stretches from Sand to Derrida Their writing shows how it is both necessary and futile to look for music in poetry or for poetry in music
