The Promise and Peril of Environmental Justice Christopher H. Foreman, 2011-02-01 Are we environmentally victimizing perhaps even poisoning our minority and low income citizens Proponents of environmental justice assert that environmental decisionmaking pays insufficient heed to the interests of those citizens disproportionately burdens their neighborhoods with hazardous toxins and perpetuates an insidious environmental racism In the first book length critique of environmental justice advocacy Christopher Foreman argues that it has cleared significant political hurdles but displays substantial limitations and drawbacks Activism has yielded a presidential executive order management reforms at the Environmental Protection Agency and numerous local political victories Yet the environmental justice movement is structurally and ideologically unable to generate a focused policy agenda The movement refuses to confront the need for environmental priorities and trade offs politically inconvenient facts about environmental health risks and the limits of an environmental approach to social justice Ironically environmental justice advocacy may also threaten the very constituencies

Engaging Displaced Populations in a Future Syrian Transitional Justice Process Grace Mieszkalski,Benjamin Zyla,2021-08-23 This book offers an analysis of a prospective transitional justice process in Syria As the Syrian conflict enters into its tenth year this book asks how the sustained human rights violations and war crimes could possibly be addressed in a post conflict setting particularly in the context of the widespread displacement crisis Despite a recent movement in scholarship toward bottom up peacebuilding approaches and participatory transitional justice models the transitional justice and local peacebuilding nexus remains under theorized particularly as it relates to the engagement of displaced populations This book seeks to address this gap through the conceptualization of a locally driven transitional justice process for Syria that is founded on the integration of refugees and displaced populations Through offering a series of policy recommendations on how to implement such a process it aims to make a contribution to building a bridge of exchange between the policy practitioner world and the academy in this area of study

Plenary Papers of the 1999 Conference on Criminal Justice Research and Evaluation--enhancing Policy and Practice Through Research: Preventing school violence, 1999 Foreword This year's annual conference on criminal justice research and evaluation is a milestone of sorts Some 30 years ago the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice noted with alacrity that the revolution of scientific discovery had largely bypassed the problems of crime and crime control The method of objective analysis that had been used with stunning success to raise living standards help people live healthier lives and explore the heavens had unaccountably failed to be applied to one of the era's most pressing problems To the great good fortune of succeeding generations the Commission in its wisdom recommended creation of a Federal research agency dedicated to the scientific study of crime and criminal justice with the aim of informing and aiding the work of practitioners The National Institute of Justice the agency established by Congress to carry out that mission has for the past three decades been seeing the returns on that investment multiply Criminology has become a respected field of scholarly inquiry and we have built an impressive body of knowledge that has helped us better understand criminal behavior and the justice system More important the results of scholarly inquiries have been and are being applied to the day to day operations of law enforcement corrections the courts and other elements of the justice system In the conference which revisited the Commission with the theme Enhancing Policy and Practice Through Research we saw how the investment continues to yield returns The plenary sessions in particular emphasized praxis research put to the service of real world situations Because of the distinctiveness of this year's plenary panels we decided to publish them in three separate volumes viewing crime from the street level addressing school violence through research based policy developed through an interdisciplinary approach and understanding the involvement of women and girls in the criminal justice system Sudhir Venkatesh and Richard Curtis bring the ethnographer's perspective to the analysis of street crime analyzing respectively the financial activity of gangs and recent trends in drug dealing Their method distinct from that of conventional quantitative social science calls for intensive observation over long periods and involves the quest for what is a iv specific to single places and times and what is generalizable The close up street level observations of study subjects offer singular insights for practitioners who deal with these individuals as offenders In this panel we also benefited from the perspective of Charles Ramsey Chief of the Metropolitan Police Department Washington D C His indication that drug trafficking and gang crime persist in his jurisdiction despite the overall drop in crime offers proof of the ethnographer's caution against facile generalization This year marks the first time the program offices of the Office of Justice Programs OJP the Corrections Program Office the Drug Courts Program Office the Executive Office for Weed and Seed and the Violence Against Women Office have joined the OJP bureaus as conference sponsors Because these offices work so closely with the practitioner community I feel their sponsorship is an added expression of their commitment to research I think they would endorse Chief Ramsey's succinct assessment of the role of research in affecting crime levels in the years to come as bringing to light findings useful for fashioning real world solutions The best way to predict the future the Chief said is to help create it Those who wish to read more can find abstracts of the conference sessions on the World Wide Web at <http://www.ilj.org> Jeremy Travis Director National Institute of Justice
