

Steps to prevent workplace sexual harassment

Persons conducting a business or undertaking, such as employers, have a work health and safety duty to eliminate or minimise the risk of sexual harassment at the workplace, so far as is reasonably practicable.

There are a number of steps you can take to manage the risk of sexual harassment and meet your work health and safety duties.

Here are some ideas to help you start doing what you reasonably can to prevent sexual harassment at your workplace.

Steps to take:

Create a safe physical and online work environment

Implement workplace policies

Create a positive and respectful workplace culture

Address unwanted or offensive behaviour early

Provide information and training on preventing sexual harassment

Quickly respond to reports of sexual harassment

Talk to your workers

Encourage workers to report any sexual harassment

Implement safe work systems and procedures

You should provide support, informal, formal, anonymous and/or confidential reporting

You must talk to your workers throughout each step of the risk management process.

See the Guide: Preventing workplace sexual harassment for further information.
