of the subject Metamorphoses also focuses on the implications of these theories for cultural criticism and a redefinition of politics. It provides a vivid overview of contemporary culture with special emphasis on technology, the monstrous imaginary, and the recurrent obsession with the flesh in the age of techno bodies. This highly original contribution to current debates is written for those who find changes and transformations challenging and necessary. It will be of great interest to students and scholars of philosophy, feminist theory, gender studies, sociology, social theory, and cultural studies.

Signal Traffic Lisa Parks, Nicole Starosielski, 2015-06-15. The contributors to Signal Traffic investigate how the material artifacts of media infrastructure—transoceanic cables, mobile telephone towers, Internet data centers, and the like—intersect with everyday life. Essayists confront the multiple and hybrid forms networks take, the different ways networks are imagined and engaged with by publics around the world, their local effects, and what human beings experience when a network fails. Some contributors explore the physical objects and industrial relations that make up an infrastructure. Others venture into the marginalized communities orphaned from the knowledge economies, technological literacies, and epistemological questions linked to infrastructural formation and use. The wide-ranging insights delineate the oft-ignored contrasts between industrialized and developing regions, rich and poor areas, and urban and rural settings, bringing technological differences into focus. Contributors include Charles R. Acland, Paul Dourish, Sarah Harris, Jennifer Holt, and Patrick Vonderau. Shannon Mattern, Toby Miller, Lisa Parks, Christian Sandvig, Nicole Starosielski, Jonathan Sterne, and Helga Tawil Souri.

War on the Human Konstantinos Blatanis, Theodora Tsimpouki, 2017-05-11. The essays in this collection explore the question of the human, both as a contested concept and as it relates to and functions within the wider global conjuncture. The authors explore the theoretical underpinnings of the term "human," inviting the reader to reflect upon the contemporary human condition, to identify opportunities and threats in the changes ahead, and to determine what aspects of our species we should abandon or strive to maintain. The volume approaches these ideas from a myriad of perspectives, but the authors are united in their abstention from rejecting humanism outright or indeed fully endorsing posthumanism's teleological narrative of accelerated progress and perfectability. Instead, the authors argue that the term "human" itself is better understood as a concept perpetually undergoing revision and is necessarily subject to scrutiny. The contributors here are thus concerned with investigating the following questions: What does it mean to be human or to have a self? What is the current place or status of the human in the contemporary world? As technology is increasingly used to modify our bodies and minds, to what extent should we alter, and how can we improve our very understanding of human nature? The authors contend that literature is the art form best placed to answer these questions. In its dynamism and discursiveness, literature has the capacity to both reflect dominant discourses and ideologies, as well as to generate and even anticipate social change, to critique and refine conventional ideas and existing cultural modes, and to envision new possibilities for the future. The human and its literary representation, in other words, are inherently intertwined.
