

A serene sunset scene over a body of water. The sky is filled with soft, colorful clouds in shades of purple, pink, and orange. The water reflects the vibrant colors of the sky. In the foreground, a small, dark-colored boat is visible, partially obscured by the text overlay. The overall mood is peaceful and contemplative.

Why music? The various potential roles of music in the foreign language classroom John Schulze, 2019-09-30 Seminar paper from the year 2018 in the subject Didactics for the subject English Pedagogy Literature Studies grade 1.0 Free University of Berlin Institut für Englische Philologie Arbeitsbereich Didaktik des Englischen course Kompetenzorientierung im Englischunterricht language English abstract Music can be an extremely versatile tool for the foreign language teacher It has the potential to support and improve learning on a variety of levels it can activate motivate or relax students it can help memorization of vocabulary or language structures it can bridge cultural gaps or contribute to the emergence of a learning community it can have neurological benefits it can be used as authentic learning material or in the form of a ritual and so forth Theoretical and empirical work has been carried out to support these claims of which many must feel obvious to foreign language teachers since music and song are essential parts of human culture and play a significant role part in the language learning of infants but these works are scattered across a range of disciplines from anthropology to linguistics or neuroscience and to the best of the knowledge of the author cannot be found in collected form in any publication

Music, in a Foreign Language Andrew Crumey, 1994 Two people meet on a train the young man is imagining a novel and imagining the life of the young woman A waiter rushes out to find a girl he fancied who hasn't paid her bill only to find a diary in which their fictitious flirtation is anatomised But the story actually begins with a man taking a leak after making love to his wife He has the inklings of a novel but thoughts will keep intruding with all their seductive possibilities The man on the train is living in an England that has decided with characteristic diffidence and lack of fuss that it no longer wants to live under a totalitarian regime which has lasted for 40 years I say totalitarian but think more of Brazil a world of terribly genial tyranny where officialdom tries so hard to be accommodating And Duncan has another story one prompted by the memory of his father's car crashing down a slope As with all good postmodernist novels the endless digressions are more soothing than jarring Murrough O'Brien in The Independent on Sunday The strikingly inventive structure of this novel allows the author to explore the similarities between fictions and history At any point there are infinite possibilities for the way the story a life or the history of the world might progress The whole work is enjoyably unpredictable and poses profound questions about the issues of motivation choice and morality The Sunday Times A writer more interested in inheriting the mantle of Pynchon and Kundera than Amis and Drabble Like much of the most interesting British fiction around at the moment Music in a Foreign Language is being published in paperback by a small independent publishing house giving hope that a tentative but long overdue counter attack is being mounted on the indelible conservatism of the modern English novel With this novel he has begun his own small stand against cultural mediocrity and to set himself up like his hero as a refugee from drabness From tinned peas and rain Jonathan Coe in The Guardian
