Instructional Materials for Language Development Under the National Defense Education Act of 1958, Title VI, Section 602 ,1969 Intransitive Predication Leon Stassen,2003 This book investigates cross linguistic variation in one of the core domains of all natural languages Leon Stassen views this domain as a cognitive space the topography of which is the same for all languages It is assumed to consist of four subdomains which correspond to a four way distinction between the semantic classes of event predicates property predicates class predicates and locational predicates The book offers a typology of the structural manifestations of this domain in terms of the nature and number of the formal strategies used in its encoding The author disusses a number of abstract principles which can be employed in explaining the cross linguistic variation emodied by the typology In the final chapter he brings together the research results in a universally applicable model which can be read as a flow chart for the encoding of intransitive predications in different language types

Universals in Comparative Morphology Jonathan David Bobaljik,2012-10-05 An argument for and account of linguistic universals in the morphology of comparison combining empirical breadth and theoretical rigor This groundbreaking study of the morphology of comparison yields a surprising result that even in suppletion the wholesale replacement of one stem by a phonologically unrelated stem as in good better best there emerge strikingly robust patterns virtually exceptionless generalizations across languages Jonathan David Bobaljik describes the systematicity in suppletion and argues that at least five generalizations are solid contenders for the status of linguistic universals The major topics discussed include suppletion comparative and superlative formation deadjectival verbs and lexical decomposition Bobaljik s primary focus is on morphological theory but his argument also aims to integrate evidence from a variety of subfields into a coherent whole In the course of his analysis Bobaljik argues that the assumptions needed bear on choices among theoretical frameworks and that the framework of Distributed Morphology has the right architecture to support the account In addition to the theoretical implications of the generalizations Bobaljik suggests that the striking patterns of regularity in what otherwise appears to be the most irregular of linguistic domains provide compelling evidence for Universal Grammar The book strikes a unique balance between empirical breadth and theoretical detail The phenomenon that is the main focus of the argument suppletion in adjectival gradation is rare enough that Bobaljik is able to present an essentially comprehensive description of the facts at the same time it is common enough to offer sufficient variation to explore the question of universals over a significant dataset of more than three hundred languages Otto E. Miller, Plaintiff-Respondent, Against Fred W. Smythe,

Defendant-Appellant , Predicative Possession Leon Stassen, 2009-05-07 This pioneering work draws on data from over 400 languages from a wide range of language families to establish a typology of four basic types of predicative possession. It examines their interdependence with other typologies and explores varieties of related grammaticalization processes.
