Electronic Noses and Olfaction 2000 Julian W. Gardner, Krishna C. Persaud, 2001-01-01 Electronic Noses and Olfaction 2000 reflects the state of progress toward the development and application of electronic instruments called electronic noses e noses These instruments are generally based on arrays of sensors for volatile chemicals with broadly tuned selectivity coupled to appropriate pattern recognition systems They are capable of detecting and discriminating a number of different simple and complex odors such as the headspace of coffee and olive oil as well as being able to perform simple multicomponent gas analysis Written by international scientists engineers technologists clinicians investigators and instrument manufacturers working in the applied research of e noses as well as in the applications of olfaction and taste this volume is essential reading for anyone who wants a review of the latest developments in odor sensors instrumentation and signal processing and their medical agricultural and food related applications Nasology: or hints towards a classification of noses Eden Warwick, 1848 Electronic Noses & Sensors for the Detection of Explosives J.
