The Wupatki Archeological Inventory Survey Project Bruce A. Anderson,1990 Southwest Cultural Resources Center Professional Papers ,1983 History of the Native People of Canada, Volume III (A.D. 500 - European Contact) James Vallière Wright,1996-01-01 Part 1 of the final volume of A History of the Native People of Canada treats eastern Canada and the southern Subarctic regions of the Prairies from A D 500 to European contact It examines the association of archaeological sites with the Native peoples recorded in European documents and particularly the agricultural revolution of the Iroquoian people of the Lower Great Lakes and Upper St Lawrence River Part 2 was never completed as the author passed away Published in English Goat Canyon Enhancement Project ,2001 Victims of Ireland's Great Famine Jonny Geber,2018-03-15 With one million dead and just as many forced to emigrate the Irish Famine 1845-52 is among the worst health calamities in history Because historical records of the Victorian period in Ireland were generally written by the middle and upper classes relatively little has been known about those who suffered the most the poor and destitute But in 2006 archaeologists excavated an until then completely unknown intramural mass burial containing the remains of nearly 1 000 Kilkenny Union Workhouse inmates In the first bioarchaeological study of Great Famine victims Jonny Geber uses

skeletal analysis to tell the story of how and why the Famine decimated the lowest levels of nineteenth century Irish society Seeking help at the workhouse was an act of desperation by people who were severely malnourished and physically exhausted Overcrowded it turned into a hotspot of infectious disease as did many other union workhouses in Ireland during the Famine Geber reveals how medical officers struggled to keep people alive as evidenced by cases of amputations but also craniotomies Still mortality rates increased and the city cemeteries filled up until there was eventually no choice but to resort to intramural burials Deceased inmates were buried in shrouds and coffins an attempt by the Board of Guardians of the workhouse to maintain a degree of dignity towards these victims By examining the physical conditions of the inmates that might have contributed to their institutionalization as well as to the resulting health consequences Geber sheds new and unprecedented light on Ireland's Great Hunger
