Forced to leave school at sixteen, she trained as a shorthand typist, worked for four years in the mid 1930s for a West End Bank and conducted a tumultuous romance with the then 19-year-old poet Dylan Thomas. Thomas having persuaded her she would become a better novelist than a poet, she published a scandalous first novel in 1935 and went on to publish close to thirty more in her career. A passionate defender of the narrative traditions of the British novel, she contributed many essays and reviews on contemporary fiction to periodicals and newspapers. In her own fiction, in the nineteenth-century traditions of Jane Austen, George Eliot and Charles Dickens, she focused on the domestic, everyday, the moral questions facing a rapidly changing society and the challenges and pleasures of urban life. She was very much a novelist of the city, particularly London. She also gained praise and criticism for her writings about violence and pornography, especially in her well-known analysis of the notorious Moors murder trial. With C P Snow, she travelled many times to the United States and the Soviet Union, and at the time of her death in 1981, she was still at work on her last novel. Hers was a rich, courageous and politically committed writing life, and this biography restores Johnson's work to the critical distinction it received when it was published. Christine Hall, a mother in her late thirties, is on holiday on the south coast of England when she bumps into an old friend, Celia Baird, staying with her parents at the Moray hotel. Celia, eccentric, impulsive, is one of a tangled group of friends who have Christine at their core. There's architect Eric Aveling, who happens to be having an affair with Celia; his wife terminally ill; Lois and Junius Evans, Eric's business partner. When death affects a shift in the dynamics of the group, none of them expect the final outcome. Duty, guilt, secrecy, loneliness: the hidden side of marriage is uncovered as choices are thrust upon the characters. Praise for Pamela Hansford Johnson: Witty, satirical and deftly malicious.
