

PANAMARENKO

(FOR CLEVER HUMANS, MISERABLES AND FOOLS)

Antwerp Place and Time

I n Belgium there is an old-spirited saying that a Belgian is born with a brick in his stomach, one interpretation of which is that Belgium's soul is war along to home; that they continue to live in the town in which they were born. In Antwerp, the feeling of war seems to saturate the people. In this respect, Antwerp is a place in which the serious, human, often, stupid, the old Europe can still rub against each other in very uncomfortable ways. As a young man and the imagination dies.

But there is another, perhaps more common way in which Antwerp appears as another country. Once the largest seaport on the northwest seaboard of Europe it is still second only in important. Perhaps the reason for this is that Belgian cities have very distinctive characters and manifest strikingly different social and cultural atmospheres. The city of Antwerp - Panamarenko's city - has a strong feeling of border territory about it. Church spires sweep into even each weekend, occupying the bars and restaurants in the historic center of the city, driving the locals from their usual haunts and wandering up and down the river, shopping, even, the Flamish city, predominantly Catholic, in feeling. Antwerp shares with south Holland and the divided provinces of Brabant and Limbourg the age-old suspicion of the Catholic north, and yet the border between the two countries remains the focus of powerful negative projections. To the French, the border signifies nothing less than the beginning of social irresponsibility and untempered local chaos, whereas to the Belgians, it is seen as the place where time is the Dutch part of Rotterdam, something you would never suspect when standing in the medieval center by the cathedral. But take a flight from the airport at Deurne across the old, long, river towards London, and the size of the industrial and commercial maritime area stretching along the banks of the River Scheldt is immediately apparent. This historic port area, where Panamarenko used to visit his father as a child, expanded greatly in the post-

Panamarenko For Clever Scholars Astronomers And Doctors:

Panamarenko: For Clever Scholars, Astronomers and Doctors Panamarenko, Jon Thompson, 2020-07-21 Book completely designed and edited by the artist himself During a career spanning more than 50 years the Belgian visionary Panamarenko engineer poet artist physicist inventor conducted meticulous studies of the natural world and various scientific principles He analyzed the secrets of the universe gravity and other energetic mysteries and formulated both logical and well considered solutions His work was poetic the result of a seamless coalescence of artistic skill and scientific research the outcome of which could take the form of a flying saucer backpack helicopter flying carpet zeppelin solar powered car submarine or prehistoric mechanical bird Each of his spectacular constructions possessed not only a peculiar beauty and naive playfulness but also a degree of conspicuous consideration In 2001 the Museum of Contemporary Art in Ghent held a retrospective of Panamarenko's work for which the artist designed and wrote this oversized catalog a work of art in its own right Beyond Given Knowledge Harri Veivo, Jean-Pierre Montier, Françoise Nicol, David Ayers, Benedikt Hjartarson, Sascha Bru, 2017-12-18 The effort to go beyond given knowledge in different domains artistic scientific political metaphysical is a characteristic driving force in modernism and the avant gardes Since the late 19th century artists and writers have frequently investigated their medium and its limits pursued political and religious aims and explored hitherto unknown physical social and conceptual spaces often in ways that combine these forms of critical inquiry into one and provoke further theoretical and methodological innovations The fifth volume of the EAM series casts light on the history and actuality of investigations quests and explorations in the European avant garde and modernism from the late 19th century to the present day The authors seek to answer questions such as How have modernism and the avant garde appropriated scientific knowledge religious dogmas and social conventions pursuing their investigation beyond the limits of given knowledge and conceptions How have modernism and avant garde created new conceptual models or representations where other discourses have allegedly failed In what ways do practises of investigation quest or exploration shape artistic work or the formal and thematic structures of artworks Panamarenko Frederik Leen, Panamarenko, 2005 The Architecture Chronicle Jan Kattein, 2017-03-02 During the last 30 years technological social economic and environmental changes have brought about the most dramatic evolution to architectural practice that has taken place since the profession emerged during the Italian Renaissance Whilst these changes have transformed the way architects work few contemporary books discuss architectural practice The Architecture Chronicle sets out to define the role of the contemporary architect in the light of these changes Most books on architecture start when a building is complete carefully editing out any evidence of the design and production process The Architecture Chronicle engages with the design and production process It investigates how and by whom design decisions are made and executed Chapter 1 is a diary reporting on the design and realisation of five stage sets and one urban intervention over a period of four years starting on 16 December 2003 The diary is intercepted by references that are where appropriate carefully integrated in the overall narrative Chapter 2 reflects on the diary to discover patterns and cross references and to draw conclusions The contemporary architect can be defined as three distinct characters The architect inventor challenges conventions and questions the social status quo The architect activist transgresses the boundary of the profession and enters the construction process The architect arbitrator engages the audience to realise the ambitious project The Architecture Chronicle concludes that the contemporary architect still draws and writes but that it is often the architect's ability to engage and direct that asserts his or her status To assert his or her status in the design team the architect's ability to talk and to act is more important than his or her ability to draw and write
