Duck's Eye You may have been introduced to haiku in elementary or middle school by a well-meaning teacher who told you that haiku is a type of poem from Japan set in nature and written in three lines of five seven and five syllables. However, haiku is really more challenging, more subtle and more intriguing than just saying something poetic about nature in three lines and 17 syllables. Haiku focus on a specific moment that catches the poet's attention and that sparks an imaginative leap, a haiku moment. Today, most haiku written in English and many other languages throughout the world are shorter than the traditional 17 syllables and although most are still written in three lines, it's not unusual to see a haiku presented in just one or two lines. Here's one of Tom Bierovic's haiku from Paper Boats: gathering clouds in the pelican's beak. A PB, in fact, the best haiku are unfinished until the reader adds what's sometimes called the fourth line, his or her own creative leap only hinted at by the poem itself. Here's another of Tom's haiku from Paper Boats: melting icicle, a sparrow showers drip by drip. This poem won Runner-up in the British Haiku Society's awards contest for 2019 and was published in the prestigious journal Blithe Spirit. Contest judge David Lanoue offered this commentary about the poem: The melting icicle haiku is exquisite in its observation and suggestiveness of feeling. One drip at a time the sparrow patiently showers, shaking its head. I imagine ruffling its feathers and then waiting for more. I imagine that it is also waiting for springtime heat and the resurgence of life that the melting of winter ice betokens. I sense such warmth, compassion and camaraderie. Issa-like for the little bird, Paper Boats has already earned its place among the finest collections of modern English language haiku. Readers of all ages and backgrounds will be sure to enjoy Tom Bierovic's intriguing, perceptive and beautifully crafted poems.

About the Author: Tom Bierovic, M.Ed., M.Div., is a widely published and award-winning poet. In his free time, Tom enjoys reading, playing backgammon, playing Native American flutes and Irish whistles and drumming on bongos and djembe. He and his wife Laurie make their home in DeLand, Florida.

The Paper Boat Melanie Edwards, 2020-10-23. A collection of poems for every season. To take us away from the stresses of life and to help us reconnect with nature. Melanie talks of finding happiness and peace in the company of birds, foxes and badgers. Of finding a place of belonging among the ancient trees. Of healing body and spirit in rivers and streams. Of finding happiness deep in the heart of nature where we all belong.

Poems in a Line Iosefina Schirger, The Light Color and Sound of Words. Iosefina Schirger writes and dreams touching the light color and sound of words with her fingers. Entire poems seem to come from a universe where beauty floats in the air. Wherever you start reading, poetry extends a hand; you pass through the labyrinth of love together, then linger in meditation and contemplation. The painting is created with the heart. You dream. Before writing, Iosefina contemplates the world and resonates with things. Once penetrated into us, her poetry takes on other dimensions, horizons we would never have suspected: transcendence, demiurgic discourse, symbol. Iosefina's poetry is a continuous flame; it doesn't extinguish, only illuminates, dispels shadows, sadness, unfulfillment. The flame that burns with an open fire or smolders within us is love itself, a continuous oscillation between the inner self and the surrounding world. It is Ana herself from the immortal legend, built with faith and tears in a poem and now emerging from the
