Psychological Aspects of Physical Disability

James F. Garrett, 1952 As workers in the field of rehabilitation we are realizing more and more that we do not rehabilitate people Rather we must be able to reach the heart and mind of the individual with whom we are dealing so he will want to avail himself of the services our program can provide for him His drive to accomplish his own rehabilitation must come from within himself and we must be sensitive too in the factors that can help or hinder establishing this indispensable primary base for rehabilitation Increasingly we are learning that human motivation is influenced by many things Especially important are the psychological and social factors of an individual's life These factors are important to consider early in our planning for the whole program of rehabilitation for the individual and in the evaluation of each step of its development This bulletin was written primarily for vocational rehabilitation counselors It is expected that it will assist them in planning better rehabilitation programs The need for awareness of the psychological adjustment mechanisms of the physically disabled is not confined to the counselor however and it is hoped that physicians social workers psychologists and placement specialists may profit from the contents of this publication The cooperation and coordination of the various specialties is the most important element today in providing rehabilitation services for the disabled whereby they may take their rightful place as contributing members of society The interest and cooperation of the authors and the organizations many of them represent is a practical demonstration of the vital nature of the material presented herein We are aware of the fact that successful rehabilitation programs depend on integrated community activity and in a sense this bulletin epitomizes that approach

Shuman, 2009-06-23 As many as one in four adults in the workforce will suffer from psychiatric illness in a given year Such illness can have serious consequences job loss lawsuits workplace violence yet the effects of mental health issues on job functioning are rarely covered in clinical training In addition clinicians are often asked to provide opinions on an employee's fitness for work or an evaluation for disability benefits only to find themselves embroiled in complex legal and administrative conflicts A unique collaboration between a renowned clinical professor of psychiatry and a noted legal expert Evaluating Mental Health Disability in the Workplace approaches the topic from two distinct areas the legal context and issues relevant to disability and disability related evaluations and the interplay of factors in the relationship between work and psychiatric illness From this dual perspective the authors advocate for higher professional standards ensuring that employers evaluatees or third parties are provided with the most reliable information Key features of the book A robust assessment model of psychological disability in the workplace Practice guidelines for conducting workplace mental health disability evaluations Legal and ethical aspects of employment evaluations especially as they differ from clinical procedure Examination of the process of psychiatric disability development Issues specific to evaluations for Social Security Workers Compensation and other disability benefit programs Review of relevant administrative and case law As an introduction to these complex issues or for the further improvement of evaluation skills Evaluating Mental Health Disability in the Workplace is a timely reference for psychiatrists psychologists forensic mental health specialists and attorneys in this field A Survey of Higher Education Facilities and Services for Students with Disabilities Elinor Gollay, 1977 Sourcebook of Rehabilitation and Mental Health Practice David P. Moxley, John R.

Finch, 2006-04-11 We live in a day and age in which many fields come together to define new ones and out of these newly defined areas come innovative practices and emergent ways of thinking The Sourcebook on Rehabilitation and Mental Health Practice documents one of these new fields one formed by the coalescence of rehabilitative and mental health services and employment Only recently have human service practitioners policy makers and administrators recognized that there is a growing synergy among these areas once separated by great gulfs of differences in culture perspectives and values and technologies It is not happenstance that rehabilitation mental health and employment are becoming increasingly integrated in contemporary human services There is considerable interest in work in contemporary society although different values and perspectives mediate this interest For people with disabilities an interest in work often comes from deep frustration from not having ready access to work and from not having enough of it to facilitate an acceptable quality of life or independent living Some people find work to be a source of problems that negatively affects their functioning They find the workplace stressful and unsupportive or they feel that work exacts too much from them reducing their quality of life and setting into motion numerous negative personal effects Beck 2000
