efficient and equitable public policy both at the national and international levels in supporting sustainable forestry in developing countries. Our project has specifically focused on 90 tropical countries as one group and on three subgroups by continents as well as the three case study countries: the Philippines, Ethiopia, and Chile. The University of Joensuu has been our active partner in the Philippine study. We have complemented the three cases by the analyses of Brazil and Indonesia, the two largest tropical forest owning countries. Some other interesting country studies were annexed to complement our book both by geography and expertise. The United Nations University World Institute for Development Economics Research (UNU-WIDER) in Helsinki, Finland, has also been partly engaged. Most of the results from its project on The Forest in the South and North in Context of Global Warming will however be published later in a separate book.

The Australian People James Jupp, 2001-10. Australia is one of the most ethnically diverse societies in the world today. From its ancient indigenous origins to British colonisation followed by waves of European then international migration in the twentieth century, the island continent is home to people from all over the globe. Each new wave of settlers has had a profound impact on Australian society and culture. The Australian People documents the dramatic history of Australian settlement and describes the rich ethnic and cultural inheritance of the nation through the contributions of its people. It is one of the largest reference works of its kind, with approximately 250 expert contributors and almost one million words. Illustrated in colour and black and white, the book is both a comprehensive encyclopedia and a survey of the controversial debates about citizenship and multiculturalism now that Australia has attained the centenary of its federation.
