This case study examines the socioeconomic changes that took place between 1990 and 2000 in and around lands managed by the Bureau of Land Management BLM Coos Bay District in southwestern Oregon for purposes of assessing the effects of the Northwest Forest Plan the Plan on rural economies and communities in the Coos Bay region The case study included an analysis of changes in the districts programs as well as socioeconomic changes that occurred within the communities of Coos

Bay Myrtle Point and Reedsport Data were gathered during 2003 and 2004 from multiple sources including U S census databases county and state criminal justice and economic development databases and BLM annual reports Interviews with BLM employees and community residents provided additional insights on how the Plan affected local socioeconomic conditions and the districts interactions with local communities General Technical Report PNW-GTR ,1987 Timber

Hydrologic Effects of a Changing Forest Landscape National Research Council,Division on Earth and Life Studies,Water

Science and Technology Board,Committee on Hydrologic Impacts of Forest Management,2008-12-19 Of all the outputs of forests water may be the most important Streamflow from forests provides two thirds of the nation s clean water supply

Removing forest cover accelerates the rate that precipitation becomes streamflow therefore in some areas cutting trees causes a temporary increase in the volume of water flowing downstream This effect has spurred political pressure to cut trees to increase water supply especially in western states where population is rising However cutting trees for water gains is not sustainable increases in flow rate and volume are typically short lived and the practice can ultimately degrade water quality and increase vulnerability to flooding Forest hydrology the study of how water flows through forests can help illuminate the connections between forests and water but it must advance if it is to deal with today s complexities including climate change wildfires and changing patterns of development and ownership This book identifies actions that scientists forest and water managers and citizens can take to help sustain water resources from forests Necessary Work Max G.

Geier,2007 The H J Andrews Experimental Forest Andrews Forest is both an idea and a particular place It is an experimental landscape a natural resource and an ecosystem that has long inspired many people On the landscape of the Andrews Forest some of those people built the foundation for a collaborative community that fosters closer communication among the scientists and managers who struggle to understand how that ecosystem functions and to identify optimal management strategies for this and other national forest lands in the Pacific Northwest People who worked there generated new ideas about forest ecology and related ecosystems Working together in this place they generated ideas developed research proposals and considered the implications of their work They functioned as individuals in a science based community that emerged and evolved over time Individuals acted in a confluence of personalities personal choices and power relations In the context of this unique landscape and serendipitous opportunities those people created an exceptionally potent learning environment for science and management Science in this context was largely a story of personalities not simply a matter of test tubes experimental watersheds or top down management sponsored by a large federal agency or university Ideas flowed in a constructed environment that eventually linked people place and community with an emerging vision of ecosystem management Drawing largely on oral history this book explores the inner workings and structure of that science based community Science themes management issues specific research programs the landscape itself and the people who work there are all indispensable components of a complex web of community the Andrews group The first four chapters explore the origins of the Forest Service decision to establish an experimental forest in the west central Oregon Cascades in 1948 and the people and priorities that transformed that field site into a prominent facility for interdisciplinary research in the coniferous biome of the International Biological Programme in the 1970s Later chapters explore emerging links between long term research and interdisciplinary science at the Andrews Forest Those links shaped the groups response to concerns about logging in old growth forests during the 1980s and 1990s Concluding chapters explore how scientists in the group tried to adapt to new roles as public policy consultants in the 1990s without losing sight of the community values that they considered crucial to their earlier accomplishments
