

teacher who was prepared to expose his techniques to scrutiny. In this book his method of 'microanalysis' is vividly conveyed by verbatim transcripts of videotaped interviews and recordings of teaching sessions.

In initial interviews, Console combined searching diagnostic questions with interventions designed to promote a therapeutic alliance. Most impressive was his attention to, and discussion of, subtle nuances of verbal and non-verbal behaviour in making predictions, promoting a dynamic interchange and demonstrating to students, aspects of 'resistance', 'transference' and 'counter-transference'.

The reader may be sceptical about some of Dr Console's psychoanalytical formulations, shocked by his intrusive questions, and irritated by his didacticism; but he cannot fail to profit by this testament to the value of a videotape in psychotherapeutic teaching and practice. Any book is to be welcomed that gives to broad formulations a local habitation and a name in the minutiae of technique.

Not Quite Like Home: Small Hostels for Alcoholics and Others. By SUMNER ORVO and JOE OROSCO. Gloucester: John Wiley, 1978. Pp 218. £7.95.

The development of services for alcoholics in this country has followed a clear chronological pattern. First began the development of self-help groups such as Alcoholics Anonymous, this was then followed by specialized units in hospitals and only in the last decade has there been to a significant degree the development of community facilities such as information centres and hostels. It is about the latter that this book is concerned.

The book is divided into two sections, the first part is a critical review of hostels and the second a report of research carried out at two specific hostels.

The authors emphasize how small communities have developed as a reaction against large institutions like mental hospitals and they examine the aims of small communities such as socialization, and providing access to skills and resources that clients can use. Hostels vary in their structure and different varieties of hostel organization are examined. They emphasize that their approach to researching alcoholism hostels has not been to examine outcome which at this stage of development does not seem useful but to identify problem areas in the operation of small hostels. The paucity of material that is available in this country to enable hostels to be evaluated in treatment outcome terms is emphasized.

The second half of the book consists of research at two hostels with interviews of residents and staff at frequent intervals. The research describes the referral and admission mechanism and reports demographic data on hostels' inmates. The manner in which the hostels were run, rates of turnover of clients and in which ways clients change during their stay are examined.

This book is not light reading both in relation to the type used, and the lack of summaries in some chapters. One wonders whether the social workers running such hostels will in fact read this book. It should, however, be read particularly in view of its newness i.e. the first critical approach in the field relating to alcoholism hostels. Clearly this is the beginning of a series of studies which will be needed in a field which is rapidly developing, a development which seems at times more based on fashion than fact. The beginning of the facts are provided by these authors.

Aspects of Alcoholism. Edited by D. L. DAVIES. London: Alcohol Education Centre, The Maudsley Hospital. £3.50 plus postage.

The major educational development in alcoholism since 1969 has been the establishment of Summer Schools, initially under the aegis of the Camberwell Council on Alcoholism and more recently under the Alcohol Education Centre. Excellent multi-disciplinary teaching at these schools is well recognized and this volume was a response from students at the school who asked for a publication that would cover the same aspects of alcoholism as discussed at the school. It is a loose-leaf book really—notes which can be removed and replaced by later chapters. Although it is designed primarily for Summer School students it is stated in the introduction to be of interest to a much wider audience who wish for basic education in the subject. From this aspect therefore it has to be compared with other volumes which are catering for the same audience. The range of subjects is wide from basic physiology and concepts of alcoholism to psychological and social factors in aetiology, epidemiological studies and complications of drinking including criminality. There are chapters relating to services available to help the alcoholic and one on 'Prevention'. Chapters on 'Social Work Theory' and 'Social Work Services' are of value as these subjects are rarely discussed in a coherent way as they are here.

Perhaps the major difficulty with this book is the unevenness of the contributions. For students attending the school the book is obviously of considerable value. For others it would appear to be a useful collection of review articles, one of a range of

Not Quite Like Home Shirley Otto, Jim Orford, 1978 Dictionary of Social Welfare Noel W Timms, Rita Timms, 2016-06-10 First published in 1982 this dictionary offers a practical aid to students of social work and of social policy in their conversation about social welfare It explains the meaning or range of meanings of common terms and explains their applications in welfare legislation policy and use by welfare practitioners It helpfully cross references terms with similar or related terms that might be considered alongside In addition most entries are concluded by references which introduce the reader to a more extended treatment of the term or an elaboration of its application in the language of social welfare Although first published in 1989 this book will be a valuable resource for students of social work social policy and social welfare

Alcohol Problems Gillie Ruscombe-King, Sheila Hurst, 1993 The helplessness often felt by families involved with drinkers is frequently shared by professionals and by the drinkers themselves This book uses these parallel experiences to build a resource that provides an understanding of why people may drink to excess and combines this with illustrations of ways of dealing with problems linked to drinking

Clinical Case Studies in the Behavioral Treatment of Alcoholism William M. Hay, Peter E. Nathan, 2012-12-06 There is no shortage of books on behavioral research on behavioral research on alcoholism or on behavioral research on alcoholism treatment Most of the authors of chapters in this book have been involved in the writing of these books The books and their authors have played an important role in the dramatic increase in the influence of behavioral approaches to one of our society's most troubling human problems There are not many books though which detail the longitudinal course of the behavioral therapies none doing so for behavior therapy with alcoholics and problem drinkers That this book now appears then is a first made more valuable by the fact that the chapter's authors are both researchers and clinicians willing and able to combine respect for empirical data with clinical sensitivity and compassion concern and commitment for their patients The chapters in this book reveal important commonalities and telling divergencies in technique strategy and treatment tactics Despite a common perspective on etiology and treatment the authors of the chapters in this book diverge in criteria for deciding on treatment goal choice of initial intervention target the specifics of techniques used and follow up procedures Common to all though is an openness to innovation a pragmatic appreciation of approaches that work and a sincere respect for the patient and his or her fundamental desire for a healthy happier and more productive life

Residential Care Ronald G. Walton, Dorren Elliott, 2014-05-19 Residential Care A Reader in Current Theory and Practice is a collection of papers that tackles the various issues and concerns in residential care The title examines the practice and theory in relation to different client groups and models of working The text first presents papers about the task in residential care such as criticisms and positive aspects of residential care and the social work task in residential care In Part II the selection covers the social work process in residential care Part III deals with ethical concerns in residential care while Part IV talks about education and training for residential work The book will be of great interest to social workers psychiatrists psychologists and teachers Treating Addictive Behaviors William R. Miller, Nick Heather, 2013-06-29 About a decade ago psychologists began exploring the commonalities among alcohol and drug abuse smoking and obesity The term substance abuse evolved into the current concept of addictive behaviors which recognizes similarities with other behaviors that do not involve consummatory responses e.g. pathological gambling compulsions sexual deviations Professional societies and journals now have been founded in both Britain and the United States with the purpose of focusing on research and treatment in the area of addictive behaviors As the field has evolved new models have emerged to address the questions and puzzles that face professionals This volume examines some of these current issues and in particular explores common processes of change that seem to cut across the addictive behaviors The chapters are based on papers presented at the Third International Conference on Treatment of Addictive Behaviors which was held at North Berwick Scotland in August of 1984 The conference was organized around an integrative model of stages and processes of change that has been useful in organizing new knowledge about how to intervene with addictive behaviors This model is set forth by its authors Jim Prochaska and Carlo DiClemente in Chapter 1 In Chapter 2 Fred Kanfer expounds his own model of self regulation which overlaps nicely with the Prochaska DiClemente framework and provides a behavioral theoretical context Helping the Problem Drinker Tim Stockwell, Sue Clement, 2023-12-01 Originally published in 1987 Helping the Problem Drinker addressed the realisation that only a small proportion of problem drinkers ever contacted existing treatment agencies and that therefore a more comprehensive community oriented approach should be developed This included training of primary care health workers and the development of multidisciplinary Community Alcohol Teams At the time other community based initiatives such as self help groups for early problem drinkers and early intervention programmes in general practice and general hospitals had been implemented This book draws together what had been learned about these new developments a number of which had now been evaluated The book will still be of interest to all planners and professional staff concerned with alcohol problems both specialists and non specialists in general medicine psychiatry psychology and the social services Residential Work with Offenders Emma Wincup, 2019-07-16 This title was first published in 2002 Throughout the book reflexive accounts of practice gathered from qualitative research in four different types of bail and probation hostels women only women only with provision for children mixed and men only are used to argue that the combination of working with a difficult client group in a difficult setting creates a unique blend of professional and personal anxieties These reflexive accounts are located within their broader social and criminal justice context and analyzed in relation to contemporary criminological and sociological debates The result is a detailed insight into the everyday world of bail and probation hostels covering issues such as managing risk and violence coping with stress and evaluating practice Community Psychology Jim Orford, 2008-04-15 This book is both a sequel to and expansion of Community Psychology published in 1992 It serves as a textbook for courses on community psychology but now also includes material on inequality and health since both are concerned with the way an individual's social setting and the systems with which they interact affect their problems and the solutions they devise Part 1 sets the scene by locating community psychology in its historical and contemporary context In Part 2 disempowered groups and their physical and mental health are considered Finally in Part 3 the application of community psychology is discussed and the ways in which marginalised people can be helped by strengthening their communities highlighted

Fragile Moralities and Dangerous Sexualities Alana Barton,2017-03-02 In this book Alana Barton explores the social control and disciplining of unruly and deviant women from the early nineteenth century to the present day Her particular focus is the semi penal institution a category that includes refuges reformatories and homes She suggests that these occupy a unique position within the social control continuum somewhere between the formal regulation of the prison and the informal control of the community or domestic sphere but at the same time incorporating methods of discipline from both arenas The book draws on Dr Barton's extensive fieldwork at one such institution currently a women's bail and probation hostel which opened as a reformatory in 1823 Barton begins by examining the ideological and social conditions underpinning the creation of this institution deconstructing the dominant feminising discourses around domesticity respectability motherhood sexuality and pathology that were mobilised to categorise and control its nineteenth century residents She goes on to discuss the contemporary experiences of women within the hostel and their strategies for coping with or resisting the disciplinary regimes and discourses imposed upon them Her analysis reveals that many of the discourses used to characterise and discipline women in reformatories during the nineteenth century continue to be utilised for the same purpose in a probation hostel nearly two hundred years later She also reveals that the distribution of power in institutions is not fixed but can be subtly negotiated and redistributed Concluding with an examination of current developments in community punishments for women this book will make a significant contribution to the literature around alternatives to custody for female offenders by strongly challenging contemporary debates liberal critical and feminist around appropriate and relevant penal policy for women
