Panama's Poor Gloria Rudolf, 1999 One of a very small number of studies on the history of survival strategies in peasant communities in Latin America The transformations Rudolf has witnessed as they occurred in the course of the many visits she has made to Loma Bonita provide a window onto the social political and economic dynamics in the community and their relation to national and global processes Hans C Buechler Syracuse University An excellent long term in depth study of a rural community in Panama It is essential reading for scholars interested in rural Latin America and the forces which shape it John R Bort East Carolina University Examining the impact of global economic forces on a small rural community in the rugged mountains of central Panama Panama's Poor illustrates peasant survival strategies and their cumulative effects on patterns of change throughout Latin America When Gloria Rudolf began visiting Loma Bonita 25 years ago most residents lived as poor but relatively independent subsistence farmers Today most are paid workers who experience greater economic insecurity dependence and inequality than before Nonetheless Rudolf says they are agents of their own destiny as well as victims an argument that challenges the commonly held view of peasants as passive victims of history Although they have not been able to reverse their general course of poverty they sometimes have managed to improve their immediate life circumstances by undertaking small scale undramatic actions in the course of their daily lives Over time the cumulative effects of these actions occasionally have influenced larger historical developments sometimes to their benefit Throughout Rudolf shows how economic and gender differences within the community play a critical role in determining people's choices for action and the course of short and long term change In writing that is both lucid and sophisticated Rudolf describes the four generations she came to know during frequent visits to Panama from elders who were raised as farmers to their great grandchildren who live today in squatter settlements near Panama City conveying respect for the complex lives of the poor and a sense of their successes and failures In one of the few existing studies of a non indigenous peasant community in Panama Rudolf sets her work in the context of national and global political and economic history Her 25 years of research in a single community enable her to trace how people have responded to and shaped the major events that have characterized Latin American society during this time population explosion rural urban migration colonization of new regions debt crisis U S economic and political involvement liberation theology and reformed Catholicism trends in development the rise of large scale industrial agriculture and structural adjustment policies Gloria Rudolf teaches anthropology and development studies at the School for International Training in Brattleboro Vermont She is the author of articles on economic development and political and religious movements in Panama and rural Latin America in journals including Urban Anthropology and Cultural Survival Quarterly      Lifestyle Migration and Colonial Traces in Malaysia and Panama Michaela Benson, Karen

Donoghue, 2014-04-23 The construction maintenance and defense of the Panama Canal brought Panamanians U S soldiers and civilians West Indians Asians and Latin Americans into close even intimate contact In this lively and provocative social history Michael E Donoghue positions the Panama Canal Zone as an imperial borderland where U S power culture and ideology were projected and contested Highlighting race as both an overt and underlying force that shaped life in and beyond the Zone Donoghue details how local traditions and colonial policies interacted and frequently clashed Panamanians responded to U S occupation with proclamations protests and everyday forms of resistance and acquiescence Although U S Zonians and military personnel stigmatized Panamanians as racial inferiors they also sought them out for service labor contraband sexual pleasure and marriage The Canal Zone he concludes reproduced classic colonial hierarchies of race national identity and gender establishing a model for other U S bases and imperial outposts around the globe margins of the famous trade route 2014 marks the 100th anniversary of the Panama Canal Beyond the Big Ditch calls us to consider how infrastructures are materially embedded in place producing environments with winners and losers

Exoticisation undressed Dimitrios Theodossopoulos,2016-07-05 Exoticisation undressed is an innovative ethnography that makes visible the many layers through which our understandings of indigenous cultures are filtered and their inherent power to distort and refract understanding The book focuses in detail on the clothing practices of the Ember in Panama an Amerindian ethnic group who have gained national and international visibility through their engagement with indigenous tourism The very act of gaining visibility while wearing indigenous attire has encouraged among some Ember communities a closer identification with an indigenous identity and a more confident representational awareness The clothes that the Ember wear are not simply used to convey messages but also become constitutive of their intended messages By wearing indigenous and modern clothes the Ember who are often seen by outsiders as shadows of a vanishing world reclaim their place as citizens of a contemporary nation Through reflexive engagement Exoticisation undressed exposes the workings of ethnographic nostalgia and the Western quest for a singular primordial authenticity unravelling instead new layers of complexity that reverse and subvert exoticisation World Poverty Marie V. The Ruse of Repair Patricia Stuelke, 2021-08-09 Since the 1990s literary and queer studies scholars have eschewed Marxist and Foucauldian critique and hailed the reparative mode of criticism as a more humane and humble way of approaching literature and culture The reparative turn has traveled far beyond the academy influencing how people imagine justice solidarity and social change In The Ruse of Repair Patricia Stuelke locates the reparative turn's hidden history in the failed struggle against US empire and neoliberal capitalism in the 1970s and 1980s She shows how feminist antiracist and anti imperialist liberation movements visions of connection across difference practices of self care and other reparative modes of artistic and cultural production have unintentionally reinforced forms of neoliberal governance At the same time the US government and military universities and other institutions have appropriated and depoliticized these same techniques to sidestep addressing structural racism and imperialism in more substantive ways In tracing the reparative turn's complicated and fraught genealogy Stuelke questions reparative criticism's efficacy in ways that will prompt critics to reevaluate their own reading practices

best known indigenous peoples of Latin America moved over the course of the twentieth century from orality and isolation towards literacy and an active engagement with the nation and the world Recognizing the fascination their culture has held for many outsiders Kuna intellectuals and villagers have collaborated actively with foreign anthropologists to counter anti Indian prejudice with positive accounts of their people thus becoming the agents as well as subjects of ethnography One team of chiefs and secretaries in particular independently produced a series of historical and cultural texts later published in Sweden that today still constitute the foundation of Kuna ethnography As a study of the political uses of literacy of western representation and indigenous counter representation and of the ambivalent inter cultural dialogue at the heart of ethnography Chiefs Scribes and Ethnographers addresses key issues in contemporary anthropology It is the story of an extended ethnographic encounter one involving hundreds of active participants on both sides and continuing today

Esperanza Speaks Gloria Rudolf, 2021-04-15 History is often viewed from the top down powerful elites are at center stage This book instead examines a century long process of socio economic change from the bottom up primarily through the experiences of one woman Esperanza Ruiz born in 1922 and four generations of her family They tell stories about the nature and impacts of these changes on their lives and on their highland community in central Panama This view from the bottom up shows how ordinary people through their choices and actions are affected by and in turn can influence how history unfolds Readers see Esperanza s family as both victims and protagonists in their histories Born into rural poverty with limits on their options they still find small openings for actions to try to improve their circumstances Sometimes successful sometimes not they survive or move ahead by drawing on their only abundant resource each other Based on twenty field visits over the course of fifty years Esperanza Speaks is the result of a dedicated anthropologist s long term engagement with the individuals of a community and a beautiful example of ethnographic storytelling Provided by publisher Crafting

Wounaan Landscapes Julie Velásquez Runk, 2017-04-18 Panama s Dari n is a name many conservationists know Renowned for its lowland tropical forests its fame is more pronounced because a road that should be there is not environmentalists have repeatedly and remarkably blocked all attempts to connect the Americas via the Pan American Highway That lacuna that absence of a road also serves to occlude history in the region as its old growth forests give the erroneous impression of a peopleless nature In Crafting Wounaan Landscapes Julie Vel squez Runk upends long standing assumptions about the people that call Dari n home and she demonstrates the agency of the Wounaan people to make their living and preserve and transform their way of life in the face of continuous and tremendous change Vel squez Runk focuses on Wounaan crafting how their ability to subtly effect change has granted them resilience in a dynamic and globalized era She theorizes that unpredictable landscapes political decisions and cultural beliefs are responsible for environmental conservation problems and she unpacks environmental governance efforts that illustrate what happens when conservation is confronted with people in a purportedly peopleless place The everyday dangers of environmental governance without local crafting include logging land grabbing and loss of carbon in a new era of carbon governance in the face of climate change Crafting Wounaan Landscapes provides recognition of local ways of knowing and being in the world that may be key to the future of conservation practice     The Oxford Handbook of Central American History Robert H. Holden, 2022 Leading scholars of Central America offer critical analyses of major themes in the historiography of this seven country region of Latin America Chapters engage both the novice s search for basic orientation and context and the experienced scholar s interest in evaluative critiques of the historical literature
