Displaced Things in Museums and Beyond Sandra H. Dudley, 2020-11-29 Displaced Things in Museums and Beyond looks anew at the lives effects and possibilities of things Starting from the perspectives of things themselves it outlines a particular displacement approach to the museum anthropology and material culture The book explores the ways in which the objects are experienced in their present displaced settings and the implications and potentialities they carry It offers insights into matters of difference and the hope that may be offered by transformative encounters between persons and things Drawing on anthropological studies of ritual to conceptualise and examine displacement and its implications and possibilities Dudley develops her arguments through exploration of displaced objects now in museums and dislocated or exiled from their prior geographical historical cultural intellectual and personal contexts The book s approach and conclusions are relevant far beyond the museum showing that even in the most difficult of circumstances there is agency distinction and dignity in the choices and impacts that are made and that things and places as well as people have efficacy and potency in those choices In Displaced Things displacement emerges as fundamental to understanding the lives of things and their relationships with human beings and the places however defined that they make and pass within The book will be essential reading for academics and students engaged in the study of museums heritage anthropology culture and history

The Mists of Rāmañña Michael A. Aung-Thwin, 2017-04-01 Scholars have long accepted the belief that a Theravada Buddhist Mon kingdom R ma adesa flourished in coastal Lower Burma until it was conquered in 1057 by King Aniruddha of Pagan which then became in essence the new custodian and repository of Mon culture in the Upper Burmese interior This scenario which Aung Thwin calls the Mon Paradigm has circumscribed much of the scholarship on early Burma and significantly shaped the history of Southeast Asia for more than a century Now in a masterful reassessment of Burmese history Michael Aung Thwin reexamines the original contemporary accounts and sources without finding any evidence of an early Theravada Mon polity or a conquest by Aniruddha The paradigm he finds cannot be sustained How when and why did the Mon Paradigm emerge Aung Thwin meticulously traces the paradigm s creation to the merging of two temporally causally and contextually unrelated Mon and Burmese narratives which were later synthesized in English by colonial officials and scholars Thus there was no single originating source only a late and mistaken conflation of sources The conceptual methodological and empirical ramifications of these findings are significant The prevalent view that state formation began in the maritime regions of Southeast Asia with trade and commerce rather than in the interior with agriculture must now be reassessed In addition a more rigorous look at the actual scope and impact of a romanticized Mon culture in the region is required Other issues important to the field of early Burma and Southeast Asian studies including the process of Indianization the characterization of classical states and the advent and spread of Theravada Buddhism are also directly affected by Aung Thwin's work Finally it provides a geo political cultural and economic alternative to what has become an ethnic interpretation of Burma's history An electronic version of this book is freely available thanks to the support of libraries working with Knowledge Unlatched a collaborative initiative designed to make high quality books open access for the public good The open access version of this book is licensed under Creative Commons Attribution NonCommercial NoDerivatives 4.0 International CC BY NC ND 4.0 which means that the work may be freely downloaded and shared for non commercial purposes provided credit is given to the author Derivative works and commercial uses require permission from the publisher

Areal Diffusion and Genetic Inheritance Aleksandra IľUľr'evna Aikhenval'd, Alexandra Y. Aikhenvald, Robert M. W. Dixon, 2006 Two languages can resemble each other in the categories constructions and types of meaning they use and in the forms they employ to express these Such resemblances may be the consequence of universal characteristics of language of chance or coincidence of the borrowing by one language of another's words or of the diffusion of grammatical, phonetic and phonological characteristics that takes place when languages come into contact. Languages sometimes show likeness because they have borrowed not from each other but from a third language. Languages that come from the same ancestor may have similar grammatical categories and meanings expressed by similar forms. Such languages are said to be genetically affiliated. This book considers how and why forms and meanings of different languages at different times may resemble one another. Its editors and authors aim a) to explain and identify the relationship between areal diffusion and the genetic development of languages and b) to discover the means of distinguishing what may cause one language to share the characteristics of another. The introduction outlines the issues that underlie these aims, introduces the chapters which follow, and comments on recurrent conclusions by the contributors. The problems are formidable and the pitfalls numerous. For example, several of the authors draw attention to the inadequacy of the family tree diagram as the main metaphor for language relationship. The authors range over Ancient Anatolia, Modern Anatolia, Australia, Amazonia, Oceania, Southeast and East Asia, and Sub-Saharan Africa. The book includes an archaeologist's view on what material evidence offers to explain cultural and linguistic change, and a general discussion of which kinds of linguistic feature can and cannot be borrowed. The chapters are accessibly written and illustrated by twenty maps. The book will interest all students of the causes and consequences of language change and evolution.
