Merchants And Gentry In Northeast England 1650-1830:

North East England, 1850-1914 Graeme J. Milne, 2006 The development of the coalfield and the riparian manufacturing districts moulded new industrial landscapes the growth of ports and conurbations demanded innovative approaches to government and administration and the business strategies of North East entrepreneurs challenged conventional boundaries The author concludes that riverside districts on the Tyne Tees and Wear represented more viable working horizons than any regional North East in this era and raises important questions about the study of the English regions in their historical context Jacket Queenship in Britain, 1660-1837 Clarissa Campbell Orr, 2002 Queenship in Britain 1660 1837 looks at the lives of successive Queens Princesses of Wales and royal daughters and considers how they used their powers of patronage and operated within the confines of royal family politics With contributions from an international group of scholars this book brings together new approaches in gender history and court studies to present a re evaluation of this previously neglected area in the study of the British monarchy An explanation of these new approaches is contained in a substantial introduction While the essays perform detailed discussions on a variety of more specific subjects from how the foreign and Catholic wives of the restored Stuarts coped with a libertine court and a Protestant nation to the travails of Princesses of Wales the marriage options of royal daughters and the question of whether Queen Adelaide wife of William IV was a harmless philanthropist re establishing royal respectability or a real political influence behind the throne

Music-Making in North-East England during the Eighteenth Century Roz Southey, 2017-07-05 The north east of England in the eighteenth century was a region where many different kinds of musical activity thrived and where a wide range of documentation survives Such activities included concert giving teaching tuning and composition as well as music in the theatre and in church Dr Roz Southey examines the impulses behind such activities and the meanings that local people found inherent in them It is evident that music could be perceived or utilized for extremely diverse purposes as entertainment as a learned art as an aid to piety as a profession a social facilitator and a support to patriotism and nationalism Musical societies were established throughout the century and Southey illustrates the social make up of the members as well as the role of Gentlemen Amateurs in the organizing of concerts and the connections with London and other centres The book draws upon a rich selection of source material including local newspapers council and ecclesiastical records private papers and diaries and accounts of local tradesman as well as surviving examples of music composed in the area by Charles Avison Thomas Ebdon and John Garth of Durham amongst many others Charles Avison's importance is focused upon particularly and his Essay on Musical Expression is considered alongside other contemporary writings of lesser fame Southey provides a fascinating insight into the type and social class of audiences and their influence on the repertoire performed The book moves from a consideration of music being used as a fashion item evidenced by the patronage of big name soloists from London and abroad to fiddlers ballad singers music at weddings funerals public celebrations and music for marking the events of the American War of Independence and the French Revolutionary Wars It can be seen therefore that the north east was an area of important musical activity and that the music was always interwoven into the political economic religious and commercial fabric of eighteenth century life Newcastle The Biography Bill Purdue,2011-10-15

The story of the city of Newcastle from its earliest origins in Roman Britain to the present day The Letters of George Davenport, 1651-1677 George Davenport,Margaret M. Harvey,2011 Letters written by a clergyman during the late seventeenth century illuminate the religious turmoil of the period This book provides an edition of the letters of George Davenport an Anglican clergyman in the north of England whose adult career covered the period of the Interregnum and the Restoration Many of the letters are to his former Cambridge tutor William Sancroft beginning from 1651 after Sancroft had been expelled from Cambridge and continuing after the Restoration when Davenport replaced Sancroft as chaplain to John Cosin bishop of Durham later becoming Rector of Houghton le Spring Durham They were written to keep Sancroft supplied with information about Durham where he was a prebendary with license to be non resident needing to collect revenues from his living and then rebuild his prebendal house The earlier letters reveal something about the life of an illegally since episcopally ordained young Anglican who unlike many did not go into exile but stayed largely in London supported by friends Davenport eventually became a most conscientious resident parish priest and the letters throw considerable light on the Restoration settlement in the Durham diocese from the beautifying of Houghton church to the catechising of the people and the collection of tithes from a sometimes tardy flock Davenport also helped Cosin to catalogue his famous library and himself gave many manuscripts to it of which a list is included here as an appendix The letters are presented here with full introduction and elucidatory notes Creating and Consuming Culture in North-East England, 1660-1830 Helen Berry,Jeremy Gregory,2019-07-16

Historians of the long eighteenth century have recently recognised that this period is central both to the history of cultural production and consumption and to the history of national and regional identity Yet no book has as yet directly engaged with these two areas of interest at the same time By uniting interest in the history of culture with the history of regional identity Creating and Consuming Culture in North East England 1660 1830 is of crucial importance to a wide range of historians and intervenes in a number of highly important historical and conceptual debates in a timely and provocative way The book makes a substantial contribution to eighteenth century studies Not only do these essays demonstrate that in thinking about cultural production and consumption in the eighteenth century there are important continuities as well as changes that need to be considered but also they complicate the commonplace assumption of metropolitan led cultural change and cultural innovation Rather than the usual model of centre periphery diffusion a number of contributions show that cultural change in the provinces was happening at the same time as in or in some cases even before London The essays also indicate the complex relationship between cultural consumption and social status with some cultural forms being more inclusive than others Age Relations and Cultural Change in Eighteenth-century England

Barbara Crosbie, 2020 Interactions between age groups were central to major social and cultural developments in eighteenth century England and this book serves as a powerful reminder that people lived through not in the past Estates, Enterprise and Investment at the Dawn of the Industrial Revolution David Oldroyd, 2017-05-15 At the beginning of the eighteenth century the landed estate represented the largest and most clearly defined type of business organisation in existence in pre industrial England Given the need for capital wayleave rights and a ready supply of coal iron and other raw materials it is unsurprising that most historians tend to place Britain's formative industrial development on such estates where all these elements were available Yet despite this consensus relatively little attention has been paid to the management and accountancy practices of these estates which have the potential to reveal much about the development of the industrial revolution In this study the management practice on estates in the north east of England c 1700 1780 is examined through the lens of the accounts and supporting documentation Accounts encompassed every aspect of estate operations from the housekeeper's groceries to the lead and coal mines and thus provide direct evidence of the underlying management systems over a diverse range of activities The information flows on estates serve as an excellent medium for testing hypotheses concerning the management of estates and the attitudes of their owners and stewards Focusing on the surviving accounts of three leading gentry families Bowes Ridley and Cotesworth who came from contrasting social backgrounds two main issues are addressed The first concerns the productivity of estates Were estates managed efficiently as productive investments and more specifically to what extent can the landowners and their stewards legitimately be described as capitalists The second related question asks in what ways did accounting aid managerial activity at this early stage of industrial development These are the central questions this book addresses through examination of the nature and function of accounts within the organisation By looking in detail at records from this crucial region during the period of transition to an industrial Life on the Tyne Peter D. Wright, 2016-05-06 Whilst the early modern period has long been recognized as witnessing a growth in trade and consumerism the majority of studies to date have tended to focus upon London and southern England In order to provide a more balanced understanding of the dynamics at work on a national level this book explores the local economy and waterborne trades of Newcastle and the River Tyne in North East England Drawing upon a variety of primary sources including parish records probate inventories Newcastle Exchequer port books and the previously unpublished diary of an apprentice hostman none of which have been examined previously in this context the study adds significantly to our understanding of the growing community in North East England In particular it underlines the expansion of a thriving middling class with an associated culture of consumption driving a rapid increase in the import and often re export of a wide range of luxury items of food clothing and soft furnishings As the coal trade and a flourishing general trade with London and other home and overseas ports grew the book highlights the major impact upon the size and variety of work in the port and the subsequent increasing size and complexity of the water trades community and its associated business networks Eighteenth-Century Criminal Transportation G. Morgan, P. Rushton, 2003-12-18 This is the first major study of the convict in the Atlantic world of the eighteenth century It concentrates on the diverse characters of the transported men women and children and their fate in the colonies exploring at the local level the contrasts in sentencing shipping and settlement of convicts in America The central myths about transportation prevalent in the eighteenth century particularly that most felons returned are examined in the context of the burgeoning print culture of criminal biographies and newspaper stories In addition the exchange of representations between the two sides of the Atlantic and the changing American reaction to convicts are placed within the growing transatlantic debate on transportation before the American Revolution Above all the realities of escape of convicts running away and returning to England are subject to systematic investigation for the first time Northern Landscapes Tom E. Faulkner, Helen Berry, Jeremy Gregory, 2010 How distinctive is the landscape of the North East of England How far does its distinctive nature contribute to region's identity These are key questions addressed by this book drawing on hitherto little known detail and many new research findings
