Religion and Political Violence Jennifer L. Jefferis, 2009-09-10 This book uses the theory of social movements and first hand interviews to create a new analysis of religiously motivated political violence in the modern world Examining the movement to restore Sharia law to a dominant place in the Egyptian government the movement to make abortion illegal in the United States and the religious effort to secure territory in Israel the author contends that religion becomes violent not because of ideology or political context alone but because of the constantly evolving relationship between them The ebb and flow of opportunities for political access ensures that secularization and religion although polar opposites depend on each other to define themselves As a result while their respective degrees of influence will inevitably undulate over time both will remain a part of the political process for some time Thus a full understanding of both is critical to a meaningful understanding of the political process Much work has been done to understand secular social movements as part of the political process and consequentially researchers now know a great deal about the motivations resources and timing of secular social movements Considerably less research has been done in the field of religious social movements and this book fills that gap in the literature This book will be of great interest to students of political violence religion sociology and Politics and International Relations in general Jennifer Jefferis is Assistant Professor in the Department of Government Regent University USA and has a PhD in Political Science from Boston University      Political Violence in America Lori Cox

Narrative and the Politics of Identity Phillip L. Hammack, 2011 Since the late nineteenth century Jews and Arabs have been locked in an intractable battle for national recognition in a land of tremendous historical and geopolitical significance While historians and political scientists have long analyzed the dynamics of this bitter conflict rarely has an archeology of the mind of those who reside within the matrix of conflict been attempted This book not only offers a psychological analysis of the consequences of conflict for the psyche it develops an innovative compelling and cross disciplinary argument about the mutual constitution of culture and mind through the process of life story construction But the book pushes boundaries further through an analysis of two peace education programs designed to fundamentally alter the nature of young Israeli and Palestinian life stories Hammack argues that these popular interventions rooted in the idea of prejudice reduction through contact and the cultivation of cosmopolitan identities are fundamentally flawed due to their refusal to deal with the actual political reality of young Israeli and Palestinian lives and their attempt to construct an alternative narrative of great hope but little resonance for Israelis and Palestinians Grounded in over a century of literature that spans the social sciences Hammack's analysis of young Israeli and Palestinian lives captures the complex dynamic relationship among politics history and identity and offers a provocative and audacious proposal for psychology and peace education
