Reforming Special Education Policy Implementation From State Level To Street Level:

Reforming Special Education Richard Weatherley,1979 Focusing on Massachusetts innovative special education reform law Chapter 766 Reforming Special Education traces the complex processes through which an ostensibly universalistic and equitable policy can produce a biased distribution of public benefits favoring affluent clients Reforming Special Education examines three Massachusetts school systems and seven schools within those systems to determine whether laws formulated to alter practices in educating children who are deaf blind retarded and physically handicapped actually result in fair and uniform treatment of children with special needs or whether they just create more work for school personnel The book discusses individual and community wealth as factors in the allocation of funds Despite Massachusetts equalizing formula it points out that rich districts often fare better than poor ones because they have the resources and sophistication necessary to challenge funding decisions The book also reveals that bureaucrats who are charged with carrying out the changes are victimized by new laws which for lack of resources they cannot hope to put into effect Because the street level bureaucrats front line personnel develop informal means of coping with these problems and with their jobs they distort the policy they are charged with implementing and become policy makers in their own right Weatherley concludes that policy initiatives must take into account potential effects on the daily work routines of those charged with implementing them These findings have dramatic implications for all human service bureaucracies where front line staff interact with the public hospitals police departments public welfare and employment offices mental health centers and lower courts Students of public policy educators social workers or anyone involved in public service employment will find this a scholarly yet highly readable account of the organizational constraints to bureaucratic reform Reforming Special Education Richard Alan Weatherley,1977 Handbook of Educational Policy Gregory J. The Conditions of Discretion Joel Handler, 1986-08-20 This timely book is concerned with interactions between ordinary people and large public bureaucracies interactions that typically are characterized by mutual frustration and antagonism In fact as Joel Handler points out the procedural guidelines intended to ensure fairness and due process fail to take account of an initial imbalance of power and tend to create adversarial rather than cooperative relationships When the special education needs of a handicapped child must be determined parents and school administrators often face an especially painful confrontation The Conditions of Discretion focuses on one successful approach to educational decision making developed by the school district of Madison Wisconsin in order to illustrate how such interactions can be restructured and enhanced Madison's creative plan regards parents as part of the solution not the problem and uses lay advocates to turn conflict into an opportunity for communication Arrangements such as these in Handler s analysis exemplify the theoretical conditions under which discretionary decisions can be made fairly and with the informed participation of all concerned The Conditions of Discretion offers not only a detailed case study sympathetically described but also persuasive assessments of major themes in contemporary legal and social policy informed consent bureaucratic change social movement activity the relationship of the individual to the state From these strands Handler weaves a significant new theory of cooperative decision making that integrates the public and the private recognizes the importance of values and preserves autonomy within community A masterful blend of social criticism social sciences and humane constructive thought about the future of the welfare state Duncan Kennedy Harvard Law School

The Implementation of Inclusive Education in Beijing Kai Yu,2014-02-27 The education implementation process in China remains uncharted by researchers The Implementation of Inclusive Education in Beijing Exorcizing the Haunting Specter of Meritocracy puts forth a general theory on China s education programs encompassing policy processes actions and interactions and grounded on the views of street level bureaucrats in China Kai Yu investigates these processes and presents teachers reflections on the change process as well as implementation stories from four Beijing schools He reports on their attitudes their beliefs and their pedagogical practices for implementing the innovative education program Yu argues that the imperatives of meritocratic ideology have undermined the detracking policy and its practice The strength of a program of change rests not so much on the power of the ideas purposes and values as on the reinterpretation of the implementers based on their personal understandings of institution and practice

Richard Scott,John W. Meyer,1984 Research Handbook on Street-Level Bureaucracy Peter Hupe,2019 When the objectives of public policy programmes have been formulated and decided upon implementation seems just a matter of following instructions However it is underway to the realization of those objectives that public policies get their final substance and form Crucial is what happens in and around the encounter between public officials and individual citizens at the street level of government bureaucracy This Research Handbook addresses the state of the art while providing a systematic exploration of the theoretical and methodological issues apparent in the study of street level bureaucracy and how to deal with them Beyond Welfare Harrell R.
