Road to Katmandu Patrick Marnham,1971 Far Out Mark Liechty,2017-02-21 Westerners have long imagined the Himalayas as the world's last untouched place and a repository of redemptive power and wisdom. Beatniks, hippie seekers, spiritual tourists, mountain climbers, diverse groups of people have traveled there over the years searching for their own personal Shangri La. In Far Out, Mark Liechty traces the Western fantasies that captured the imagination of tourists in the decades after World War II, asking how the idea of Nepal shaped the everyday cross-cultural interactions that it made possible. Emerging from centuries of political isolation but eager to engage the world, Nepalis struggled to make sense of the hordes of exotic, enthusiastic foreigners. They quickly embraced the phenomenon, however, and harnessed it to their own ends by building tourists' fantasies into their national image and crafting Nepal as a premier tourist destination. Liechty describes three distinct phases: the postwar era when the country provided a Raj-like throwback experience for rich Americans; Nepal's emergence as an exotic outpost of hippie counterculture in the 1960s; and its rebranding into a hip adventure destination which began in the 1970s and continues today. He shows how Western projections of Nepal as an isolated place inspired creative enterprises and paradoxically allowed locals to participate in the global economy. Based on twenty-five years of research, Far Out blends ethnographic analysis, a lifelong passion for Nepal, and a touch of humor to produce the first comprehensive history of what tourists looked for and found on the road to Kathmandu.

Road to Katmandu Patrick Marnham,2005-10-04 Road to Kathmandu is the part factual, part fictional account of Patrick Marnham's own pilgrimage from Turkey to Nepal in 1968. He travelled over three thousand miles passing through Ankara to Ararat, Tehran and Mashad, Herat, Kandahar and Kabul, Peshawar, Lahore and Varanasi before finally reaching Kathmandu. His journey is a kaleidoscopic blend of tortuous train journeys and lethal truck drives, wild deserts, mountains and isolated villages. His nights were often spent sleeping by the roadside and his days searching for the next ride. Along the way he met a colourful and eclectic cast of characters.

British Travel Writers, 1940-1997 Barbara Brothers, Julia Marie Gergits,1999 Essays on British travel writers explores the political and social changes that occurred after World War II. Knowing Dil Das Joseph S. Alter, 2011-06-07 Dil Das was a poor farmer an untouchable living near Mussoorie a colonial hill station in the Himalayas As a boy he became acquainted with a number of American missionary children attending a boarding school in town and over the years developed close friendships with them and eventually with their sons The basis for these friendships was a common passion for hunting This passion and the friendships it made possible came to dominate Dil Das s life When Joseph S Alter one of the boys who had hunted with Dil Das became an adult and a scholar he set out to write the life history of Dil Das as a way of exploring Garhwali peasant culture But Alter found his friend uninterested in talking about traditional ethnographic subjects such as community life family or work Instead Dil Das spoke almost exclusively about hunting with his American friends telling endless tales about friendship and hunting that seemed to have nothing to do with peasant culture When Dil Das died in 1986 Alter put the project away Years later he began rereading Dil Das s stories this time from a completely new perspective Instead of looking for information about peasant culture he was able to see that Dil Das was talking against culture From this viewpoint Dil Das s narrative made sense for precisely those reasons that had earlier seemed to render it useless his apparent indifference toward details of everyday life his obsession with hunting and above all his celebration of friendship To a degree in fact but most significantly in Dil Das s memory hunting served to merge his and the missionary boys identities and thereby to supersede and render irrelevant all differences of class caste and nationality For Dil Das the intimate experience of hunting together radically decentered the prevailing structure of power and enabled him to redefine himself outside the framework of normal social classification Thus Knowing Dil Das is not about peasant culture but about the limits of culture and history And it is about the moral ambiguity of writing and living in a field of power where despite intimacy self and other are unequal
