Self-injurious Behavior James K. Luiselli, Johnny L. Matson, Nirbhay N. Singh, 2012-12-06 This volume addresses the topic of self injurious behavior SIB in per sons with developmental disabilities Among professionals and the lay public alike there is little debate over the seriousness of self injury its detrimental effects and the need for therapeutic intervention At the same time there are divergent views concerning its etiology and treat ment

Understanding the causes of self injury for example requires an analysis of biological factors socioenvironmental variables communication competencies and in complex clinical cases the interrelationships among these influences There is also uncertainty with regard to the function of self injury Put simply why would people willingly inflict injury upon themselves Finally although there is little disagreement about the necessity to intervene for self injury clinicians do not make uniform therapeutic recommendations and in fact considerable differences in treatment selection are common This fact is most apparent when one considers the ongoing controversy with regard to aversive and nonaversive programming Our premise for this volume is that a greater understanding of self injurious behavior is dependent upon an empirical research base Theories of causality must be conceptually valid and capable of being evaluated objectively Treatment must be functionally determined operationalized and replicable across personnel and settings For these reasons we have assembled chapters by individuals who are experienced clinicians and researchers in the fields of psychology medicine psychiatry education
