Where Have All the Homeless Gone? Anthony Marcus, 2006. For a decade from 1983 to 1993, homelessness was a major concern in the United States. In 1994, this public concern suddenly disappeared without any significant reduction in the number of people without proper housing. By examining the making and unmaking of a homeless crisis, this book explores how public understandings of what constitutes a social crisis are shaped. Drawing on five years of ethnographic research in New York City with African Americans and Latinos living in poverty, Where Have All the Homeless Gone reveals that the homeless crisis was driven as much by political misrepresentations of poverty, race, and social difference as by the housing, unemployment, and healthcare problems that caused homelessness and continue to plague American cities.

Black Professional Women in Recent American Fiction Carmen Rose Marshall, 2015-01-24. The last three decades of the 20th century have marked the triumph of many black professional women against great odds in the workplace. Despite their success, few novels celebrate their accomplishments. Black middle-class professional women want to see themselves realistically portrayed by protagonists who work to achieve significant productivity and visibility in their careers, desire stability in their personal lives, aspire to accrue wealth, and live elegantly, though not consumptively. The author contends that most recent American realistic fiction fails to represent black professional women, protagonists performing their work effectively in the workplace. Identifying the extent to which contemporary novels satisfy the readerly desires of black middle class women readers this book investigates why the readership wants the texts as well as what they prefer in the books they buy It also examines the technical and cultural factors that contribute to the lack of books with self empowered black professional female protagonists and considers The Salt Eaters by Toni Cade Bambara and Waiting to Exhale by Terry McMillan two novels that function as significant markers in the development of contemporary black women writers texts
