Shaping the Future of African American Film Monica White Ndounou, 2014-04-29 In Hollywood we hear it's all about the money It's a ready explanation for why so few black films get made no crossover appeal no promise of a big payoff But what if the money itself is color coded What if the economics that governs film production is so skewed that no film by or for people of color will ever look like a worthy investment unless it follows specific racial or gender patterns This Monica Ndounou shows us is precisely the case In a work as revealing about the culture of filmmaking as it is about the distorted economics of African American film Ndounou clearly traces the insidious connections between history content and cash in black films How does history come into it Hollywood's reliance on past performance as a measure of potential success virtually guarantees that historically underrepresented underfunded and undersold African American films devalue the future prospects of black films So the cycle continues as it has for nearly a century Behind the scenes the numbers are far from neutral Analyzing the onscreen narratives and off screen circumstances behind nearly two thousand films featuring African Americans in leading and supporting roles including such recent productions as Bamboozled Beloved and Tyler Perry's Diary of a Mad Black Woman Ndounou exposes the cultural and racial constraints that limit not just the production but also the expression and creative freedom of black films Her wide ranging analysis reaches into questions of literature language speech and dialect film images and narrative acting theater and film business practices production history and financing and organizational history By uncovering the ideology behind profit driven industry practices that reshape narratives by about and for people of color this provocative work brings to light existing limitations and possibilities for reworking stories and business practices in theater literature and film The Columbia Companion to American History on Film Peter C.

Rollins,2004-03-24 American history has always been an irresistible source of inspiration for filmmakers and today for good or ill most Americans sense of the past likely comes more from Hollywood than from the works of historians In important films such as The Birth of a Nation 1915 Roots 1977 Apocalypse Now 1979 and Saving Private Ryan 1998 how much is entertainment and how much is rooted in historical fact In The Columbia Companion to American History on Film more than seventy scholars consider the gap between history and Hollywood They examine how filmmakers have presented and interpreted the most important events topics eras and figures in the American past often comparing the film versions of events with the interpretations of the best historians who have explored the topic Divided into eight broad categories Eras Wars and Other Major Events Notable People Groups Institutions and Movements Places Themes and Topics and Myths and Heroes the volume features extensive cross references a filmography of discussed and relevant films notes and a bibliography of selected historical works on each subject The Columbia Companion to American History on Film is also an important resource for teachers with extensive information for research or for course development appropriate for both high school and college students Though each essay reflects the unique body of film and print works covering the subject at hand every essay addresses several fundamental questions What are the key films on this topic What sources did the filmmaker use and how did the film deviate or remain true to its sources How have film interpretations of a particular historical topic changed and what sorts of factors technological social political historiographical have affected their evolution Have filmmakers altered the historical record with a view to enhancing drama or to enhance the truth of their putative message
