sensual in many senses of the word as she invokes bright colors sounds smells and feelings Her use of vivid imagery from the natural world birds lilies horses up against that from the world of humans oppression slavery and violence ties her work to the earth even as she works a few mystical poetic transformations In Alexander s world the songs of a bird can become the voice of a girl in a caf and the red juice of mulberries can be as shocking as blood When she focuses her attention on the cloth of a girl s sari the material of a woman s life or the blood in her veins she speaks to the particular experience of women in the world The women are vividly present sometimes they are hidden or veiled juxtaposed with open gardens in full bloom It is difficult not to come away from Quickly Changing River without a new sense of the power and frailty of being alive

the Mutsun language This sets the tone for Charlotte Muse's poetry taking the form of a literary expedition at times anthropological at others anthropomorphic through many lives many times historical past and personal past bodies human and animal flesh and spirit so much layered in these pages Her opening poem Why You're Afraid of the Road answers that it might be the impulse to leave the world what if you just drove off the edge because you were tired of all curves and wanted to lie on air This thought is echoed in the title poem forgiving the river even as it carries her away giving up my own motion Already I'm dissolving in the world Writing of Last Days she imagines the earth opening to disgorge the souls of the dead so many that one walks through them like a projection there's no sensation but there's a shadow on you and for a moment a face replaces your face If this sounds morbid it's not merely another way of seeing the world And yet another way is through animals beginning with the image of an owl painted on a cave wall thirty thousand years ago left in darkness perspective frozen in stone Doesn't everything want to take in more of the world she asks for the owl and for us Later writing of a living owl flying over a mountain lake she longs to see with the bird's eyes I'll watch until mine too see wide all the way to the other side The other side of life that is She finds this gift in animals many of which appear here snakes and rats and pigs and bees Whatever a fish wants to do takes the whole fish she observes such concise advice for living Mourning the dead bodies of frogs dissected in biology classrooms occasions a plea for forgiveness from all the world Please Don't go We want you back We see now what we've broken We didn't mean to break it break it break it We didn't mean to break it Still she writes of hope that we can learn from such experiences This poem says Don't worry You're the one whose heart was broken or awakened Who knows the story better than you The closing poem describes a photograph of a lost world of Europe in 1909 a watch always ticking closer to Sarajevo and the great war and the war after that and the ends of so many worlds Like Solorsano Muse writes of and from the ends of worlds but perhaps also the possibilities of new ones The River People Polly Buckingham, 2020 The poems in Polly Buckingham's debut collection The River People move through both dream and natural landscapes exploring connection and loss abundance and degradation the personal and the political The speaker in these poems is often in a state of not knowing that can be both terrifying and revelatory It is a state in which windows and doors connect the living and the dead and the inner and outer worlds Organized in four sections that move from Florida to the Pacific Northwest the poems are heavily imagistic and reminiscent of deep image poetry and Spanish surrealism

Brocade River Poems Xue Tao, 2016-06-10 Xue Tao A.D. 768-831 was well known as a poet in an age when all men of learning were poets and almost all women were illiterate As an entertainer and official government hostess she met and impressed many of the most talented and powerful figures of her day As a maker of beautiful paper and a Taoist churchwoman she maintained a life of independence and aesthetic sensibility As a writer she created a body of work that is by turns deeply moving amusing and thought provoking Drawing knowledgeably on a rich literary tradition she created images that here live again for the contemporary reader of English This bilingual edition contains about two thirds of Xue

Tao's extant poems The translations are based on accurate readings of the originals and extensive research in both Chinese and Japanese materials The notes at the end of the book explain allusions and place the poems in the context of medieval Chinese culture and its great literary heritage while the opening essay introduces Xue Tao's work and describes her unusual life history

Poems Of The River Spirit Maurice Kilwein Guevara, 2014-08-08 The locales of these poems range from the mountains of western Pennsylvania to the Andes the subjects from memories of Kilwein Guevara's native Colombia to a New York street scene What characterizes all of them is precise and surprising language a brilliance of effect that establishes him as one of the most original young American poets
