Austerity Britain, 1945-1951 David Kynaston, 2010-12-01 As much as any country England bore the brunt of Germany's aggression in World War II and was ravaged in many ways at the war's end. Celebrated historian David Kynaston has written an utterly original and compellingly readable account of the following six years during which the country rebuilt itself. Kynaston's great genius is to chronicle the country's experience from bottom to top, coursing through the book therefore is an astonishing variety of ordinary contemporary voices eloquently and passionately evincing the country's remarkable spirit. Judy Haines, a Chingford housewife, gamely endures the tribulations of rationing. Mary King, a retired schoolteacher in Birmingham, observes how well fed the Queen looks during a royal visit. Henry St John, a persnickety civil servant in Bristol, is oblivious to anyone's troubles, but his own. Together they present a portrait of an indomitable people, and Kynaston skillfully links their stories to bigger events that the country. Their stories also jostle alongside those of more well-known figures like celebrated journalist to be John Arlott making his first radio broadcast. Glenda Jackson and Doris Lessing, newly arrived from Africa and struck by the leveling poverty of post-war Britain, Kynaston deftly weaves into his story a sophisticated narrative of how the 1945 Labour government shaped the political, economic, and social landscape for the next three decades.

Basil Street Blues: A Memoir Michael Holroyd, 2011-10-10 A wonderful offbeat memoir. Holroyd has written perhaps his best book yet. Ben Macintyre, New York Times Book Review. Renowned biographer Michael Holroyd had always assumed that his own family was perfectly English or at least perfectly ordinary. But an investigation into the Holroyd past, guided by old photograph albums, crumbling documents, and his parents' wildly divergent accounts of their lives, gradually yields clues to a constellation of startling events and eccentric characters: a slow decline from English nobility on one side, a dramatic Scandinavian ancestry on the other. Fires, suicides, bankruptcies, divorces, unconsummated longings, and the rumor of an Indian tea fortune permeate this wry, candid memoir. Part multiple biography, part autobiography, but principally an oblique investigation of the biographer's art. New York Times Book Review. A perfect example of a memoir that entrances me. Katherine A. Powers, Boston Sunday Globe. One of the few biographers who can convey what makes ordinary as well as extraordinary mortals live in our minds. Los Angeles Times.
