Schistosomes, Liver Flukes and Helicobacter Pylori IARC Working Group on the Evaluation of Carcinogenic Risks to Humans, International Agency for Research on Cancer, World Health Organization, 1994 Evaluates the carcinogenic risk to humans posed by infection with three schistosome trematodes three liver flukes and the bacterium Helicobacter pylori These biological agents were selected for evaluation on the basis of evidence suggesting a causal association between infection and the development of human cancers The first monograph assesses data on Schistosoma haematobium S. mansoni and S. japonicum the three species which account for the vast majority of schistosomal disease in humans The most extensive sections evaluate the results of studies of cancer in humans and experimental animals concentrating on the strength of evidence linking infection with S. haematobium to squamous cell carcinoma of the urinary bladder and infection with S. mansoni or S. japonicum to an increased risk for cancers of the gastrointestinal tract The monograph concludes that infection with S. haematobium is carcinogenic to humans and that infection with S. japonicum is possibly carcinogenic to humans infection with S. mansoni could not be classified The second monograph on liver flukes evaluates data on Opisthorchis viverrini O. felinus and Clonorchis sinensis These foodborne trematodes establish a chronic infection of the bile ducts and more rarely the pancreatic duct and gall bladder of humans and other mammals Most carcinogenicity data centre on the possibility that these trematodes are involved in the development of cholangiocarcinoma or liver cancer The monograph concludes that infection with O. viverrini is carcinogenic to humans and that infection with C. sinensis is probably carcinogenic to humans infection with O. felinus could not be classified The final monograph evaluates data on Helicobacter pylori More than half of the world's population may be infected with this bacterium which is responsible for most cases of chronic gastritis and duodenal ulcer Citing several studies linking infection to gastric cancer in humans the monograph concludes that infection with H. pylori is carcinogenic to humans

Schistosomes, Liver Flukes and Helicobacter Pylori, 1994 Journal of the National Cancer Institute, 2007 Infections Causing Human Cancer Harald zur Hausen, 2007-09-24 Infections must be thought as one of the most important if not the most important risk factors for cancer development in humans Approximately 15-20% of all cases of cancer around the world are caused by viruses The establishment of a causal relationship between the presence of specific infective agents and certain types of human cancer represents a key step in the development of novel therapeutic and preventive strategies In this book Professor zur Hausen Nobel Prize in Physiology Medicine 2008 provides a thorough and comprehensive overview on carcinogenic infective agents viruses bacteria parasites and protozoans as well as their corresponding transforming capacities and mechanisms The result is an invaluable and instructive reference for all oncologists microbiologists and molecular biologists working in the area of infections and cancer The author was among the first scientists to reveal the cervical cancer inducing mechanisms of human papilloma viruses and isolated HPV16 and HPV18 and as early as 1976 published the hypothesis that wart viruses play a role in the development of this type of cancer Handbook of Cancer Risk Assessment and Prevention Graham A.

Colditz, Cynthia J. Stein, 2004 Written for health care providers at all levels this handbook covers in depth fourteen of the most common cancers in the U S providing for each a scientific summary of risk factors a risk assessment tool for patients and helpful hints to promote risk reducing lifestyle changes Additional chapters focus specifically on five key lifestyle behaviors that lower not only the risk of cancer but also the risk of other chronic diseases Throughout its entirety the handbook emphasizes the importance of communicating risk effectively to patients A chapter is devoted solely to this topic and risk information about each cancer is presented in a variety of formats Finally the risk assessment tools adaptations from the popular website Your Cancer Risk offer patients the option to estimate their cancer risk and receive practical personal tips for lowering that risk At a time when the public is surrounded by conflicting health messages especially from the media and the Internet the Handbook of Cancer Risk Assessment and Prevention is an essential source for reliable up to date information on cancer prevention It delivers positive health messages and offers practical advice that health care providers can use to help patients implement strategies to prevent cancer and other chronic diseases Infectious Causes of

Immunity Against Mucosal Pathogens Michael Vajdy, 2008-07-09 Surprisingly what separates us from the open environment all around us sometimes is a single layer of epithelial cells It is at these seemingly fragile sites that most pathogens including HIV influenza emerging and biodefense agents gain access to our inside milieu While there are major similarities between the cells and the immune responses generated at the mucosal membranes of the gastrointestinal and respiratory tracts together with the genitourinary tract there are also important differences Knowledge of these differences and similarities is required in order to understand the interactions between us as the host and the pathogens that attack through each tract and how our immune system reacts to each of them Whether we want to devise rational prophylactic or therapeutic vaccines or treatments to either prevent or treat mucosal infections we must acquire such knowledge This is the rationale behind putting this book together This book will provide the readers in the areas of vaccinology virology bacteriology epidemiology immunology and mucosal immunology within academia undergraduate graduate post doctoral fellows and professors as well as preclinical and clinical scientists in vaccine and drug industries a thorough appreciation of the mucosal immune system and its importance in protecting humans against mucosal pathogens
