languages form the major eastern branch of the Indo European group of languages itself part of the larger Indo Iranian family Estimated to have between 150 and 200 million native speakers the Iranian languages constitute one of the world s major language families This comprehensive volume offers a detailed overview of the principle languages which make up this group Old Iranian Middle Iranian and New Iranian The Iranian Languages is divided into fifteen chapters The introductory chapters by the editor present a general overview and a detailed discussion of the linguistic typology of Iranian. The individual chapters which follow are written by leading experts in the field. These provide the reader with concise non-technical descriptions of a range of Iranian languages. Each chapter follows the same pattern and sequence of topics taking the reader through the significant features not only of phonology and morphology but also of syntax from phrase level to complex sentences and pragmatics. Ample examples on all levels are provided with detailed annotation for the non-specialist reader. In addition, each chapter covers lexis, sociolinguistic and typological issues and concludes with annotated sample texts. This unique resource is the ideal companion for undergraduate and postgraduate students of linguistics and language. It will also be of interest to researchers or anyone with an interest in historical linguistics, linguistics, anthropology and language development. Gernot Windfuhr is Professor of Iranian Studies at the University of Michigan; he has published widely on Persian and Iranian languages and linguistics and related languages as well as on other aspects of Iranian culture including Persian literature and Pre-Islamic Iranian religions.

Australian Languages Claire Bowern, Harold James Koch, 2004. This book addresses controversial issues in the application of the comparative method to the languages of Australia which have recently come to international prominence. Are these languages different in ways that challenge the fundamental assumptions of historical linguistics? Can subgrouping be successfully undertaken using the Comparative Method? Is the genetic construct of a far-flung Pama-Nyungan language family supportable by classic methods of reconstruction? Contrary to increasingly established views of the Australian scene, this book makes a major contribution to the demonstration that traditional methods can indeed be applied to these languages. These studies introduced by chapters on subgrouping methodology and the history of Australian linguistic classification rigorously apply the comparative method to establishing subgroups among Australian languages and justifying the phonology of Proto-Pama-Nyungan. Individual chapters can profitably be read either for their contribution to Australian linguistic prehistory or as case studies in the application of the comparative method. Contributions by B. Alpher, B. Baker, C. Bowern, G. Breen, L. Campbell, I. Green, L. Hercus, H. Koch, P. McConvell, L. Miceli, G. O. Grady, J. Simpson, L. Hercus.

Subordination and Coordination Strategies in North Asian Languages Edward J. Vajda, 2008-11-27. Across North Asia, complex sentence formation patterns display an unusually high prevalence of suffixed relational morphemes used to convey subordination. Suffixal subordinators occur in a variety of genetic groupings, most notably Samoyedic, Turkic and Tungusic, but also in some of the region's language isolates such as Ket and Ainu. No general study has surveyed complex sentences across Northern Eurasia and the Pacific Rim, an area noted both for its complicated web of language contact phenomena and its long-established genetic divisions. The 14 chapters in this volume survey synthetic and analytic methods of subordination and coordination. Much of the data reflect original fieldwork and several chapters focus on critically endangered languages. Nearly every family or isolate in North Asia is taken into consideration, as are all major formal and functional types of complex sentence formation.
