Wiemann, 2009 Human Motivation

and Interpersonal Relationships Netta Weinstein, 2014-07-08 This volume summarizes and organizes a growing body of research supporting the role of motivation in adaptive and rewarding interpersonal interactions with others The field of human motivation is rapidly growing but most studies have focused on the effects of motivation on individuals' personal happiness and task engagement Only recently have theorists and empiricists begun to recognize that dispositional and state motivations impact the ways individuals approach interpersonal interactions In addition researchers are now recognizing that the quality of interpersonal interactions influences consequent happiness and task engagement thus helping to explain previous findings to this end Similarly social psychology and relationships researchers have focused on the impact of cognitions emotions and behaviors on people's relationships In their work relationships researchers demonstrate that both contextual characteristics and individual differences influence the quality of interactions Many of these studies seek to understand which characteristics strengthen the bonds between people encourage empathy and trust and create a sense of well being after a close interaction This work seeks to integrate the field of human motivation and interpersonal relationships Both fields have seen extensive growth in the past decade and each can contribute to the other However no single compiled work is available that targets both fields This is the case in part because only now is there enough work to make a strong and compelling case for their integration In the previous years research has been conducted to show that motivation is relevant and important for interactions among strangers and in close relationships In addition developmental mechanisms for these relations are identified and mechanisms by which motivation strengthens people's relationships Finally recent work has demonstrated the many implications for interpersonal relationships showing that motivation impacts a range of interpersonal processes from prejudice regulation and objectification of others to empathy and care This book seeks to summarize and organize all these findings and present them in a way that is relevant to both motivation researchers and social and relationship researchers Dynamic Aspects Of Natural Products Chemistry Takeshi Ogura, 1997-11-21 Preface

Natural products chemistry has a long history and could be regarded as having its roots in the use of many kinds of herbal mixtures as crude drugs in traditional medicine. Systems of traditional medicine have been practiced in China and Japan for thousands of years and virtually all regions of the world have used natural materials to treat human disease. It was clear that many plants, herbs, etc. contain components with powerful biological activities. The dawn of modern natural products chemistry began with the isolation of the active component morphine from opium. Subsequently various alkaloids were isolated from medicinal plants and employed clinically. The discovery and the development of penicillin as a microbial metabolite opened up the era of antibiotics which have saved countless lives in the past half century or so. The isolation and synthesis of steroid hormones resulted in the development of new concepts in molecular stereochemistry and organic synthetic techniques as did the discovery of bioactive lipids such as prostaglandins and leukotrienes, bioactive peptides such as enkephalins and endorphins, and oligosaccharides including glycoproteins. Further the discovery of plant hormones has led to great strides in plant biotechnology including plant tissue cultures and derivatives of insect hormones and pheromones are now used as pesticides. Thus applications of natural products chemistry have become all pervasive in modern society. Apart from the extensive practical applications of natural products and their derivatives, natural products chemistry has played a central role in the development of modern organic chemistry as a result of its focus on structural and synthetic studies of often highly complex and inaccessible molecules. Biosynthetic studies have also attracted much attention aiming to answer the questions of why and how such a large number and variety of compounds are synthesised by organisms. Researchers in the field of biosynthesis first focused on elucidation of the pathways of secondary metabolism and then on the mechanisms of the enzymes catalyzing the biosynthetic reactions. This was an extremely difficult task because rather large amounts of enzymes are required for the investigation of reaction mechanisms and the enzyme proteins are often unstable and not easy to purify. However in recent years the development of molecular biology has made gene and protein engineering rather routine. Thus studies of mechanistic enzymology can now be conducted with cloned and overexpressed enzyme proteins. It has been shown that the enzymes responsible for the biosynthesis of antibiotics in Streptomyces spp. are encoded in gene clusters. Further cloning and functional analysis of the genes associated with flavonoid biosynthesis should soon cast light on the interesting question of why flavonoids are ubiquitously present in plant leaves. Life is maintained not only by large molecules such as proteins and nucleic acids but also by many small molecules which have essential and diverse roles in the physiology of living organisms. Such compounds often have highly specific interactions with target receptors but the mechanisms involved largely remain to be explored. Current methodology means that this task can be addressed and this in turn should lead to a host of new applications for natural products and their derivatives. The key may be an interdisciplinary approach taking account of both biological function and molecular behaviour based on precise structure recognition. As we increasingly understand the mechanisms of molecular recognition that operate in nature many possibilities should open up.

for artificial control or modification of biological functions as well as new challenges for synthetic organic chemists Our intention in this book is to focus on such dynamic aspects of natural products chemistry By dealing in detail with representative topics to which the most modern techniques of research have been applied we hope to emphasize the value of combining traditional approaches to natural products chemistry with current biochemical and molecular biological ideas Each chapter provides sufficient background information and experimental detail to make the subject accessible to non specialists It is our hope that these examples of recent progress in key areas of natural products chemistry will stimulate work in related topics by illustrating the power of a modern interdisciplinary approach to the subject

ICOMM: Interpersonal Concepts and Competencies Roy Berko,Joan E. Aitken,Andrew Wolvin,2010-02-16 ICOMM Interpersonal Concepts and Competencies provides an integrated approach to the study of interpersonal communication This accessibly written but authoritative text emphasizes the development of communication competencies including skills understanding of the theory and research that contextualizes the skills to make them relevant to learning and the motivation to put the skills into practice While incorporating many traditional intrapersonal and interpersonal topics found in current texts the book is distinctive in that it offers a skills based approach that is grounded in solid theory and research Students will find that the text is written in a personal and friendly manner stressing concepts skills and applications that should be an important part of their daily lives

Maintaining Relationships Through Communication Daniel J. Canary,Marianne Dainton,2003-01-30 Relational maintenance provides a rallying point for those seeking to discover the behaviors that individuals utilize to sustain their personal relationships Theoretical models research programs and specific studies have examined how people in a variety of close relationships choose to define and maintain those relationships In addition relational maintenance turns our attention to communicative processes that help people sustain their close relationships In this collection editors Daniel J Canary and Marianne Dainton focus on the communicative processes critical to the maintenance and enhancement of personal relationships The volume considers variations in maintaining different types of personal relationships structural constraints on relationship maintenance and cultural variations in relational maintenance Contributions to the volume cover a broad range of relational types including romantic relationships family relationships long distance relationships workplace relationships and Gay and Lesbian relationships among others Maintaining Relationships Through Communication Relational Contextual and Cultural Variations synthesizes current research in relationship maintenance emphasizes the ways that behaviors vary in their maintenance functions across relational contexts discusses alternative explanations for maintaining relationships and presents avenues for future research As such it is intended for students and scholars studying interpersonal communication and personal relationships
